Letter from the Front—No Fighting since Sunday Night—The Petersburgh and Weldon Railroad Commanded by Our Guns—A Cavalry Fight at White House.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 23.

A Dispatch from the Army of the Potomac, of Wednesday morning, June 22, says that no serious fighting has occurred since the night attack on Sunday night. Our line extends from the Appomattox River, on the right, to the Petersburgh and Weldon Railroad on the left. We do not hold the railroad, but have a battery commanding the bridge which our cavalry have made impassible. No trains are running.

A wounded officer, who arrived by the Lincoln Hotel, says Gregg had a fight on Tuesday with Hampton and Fitz Lee at White House. The rebels being dislodged in the first attack, they threw out their late temporary obstruction, but they soon rallied and drove the rebels two miles.

Position of Affairs on Wednesday—Gen. Hancock Improving—Capture of a Rebel Colonel and Other Prisoners.

HEADQUARTERS, Wednesday, June 22—8 A. M.

Artillery firing on the right, and picket skirmishes at various points along the line, the whole of yesterday, resulting in the wounding of a few men, but causing no change in the position. A battery stationed on an elevated piece of ground in front of Petersburgh kept annoying one of our batteries on the left for some time, when it opened in return; one of the shells exploding in the midst of the men at the rebel guns, and causing a cessation of firing on their part.

Gen. HANCOCK is recovering from his indisposition, and expects to resume the command of his corps in a few days.

President LINCOLN paid a visit to Gen. GRANT at City Point yesterday.

Col. BAKER, of the Third North Carolina Regiment, and a dozen men, were captured, and brought in last evening by the Second Corps pickets.

All the prisoners collected since the army arrived in this neighborhood have been sent to City Point for transfer eastward.

Condition of Affairs at White House—Attack of Fitz Lee's Cavalry—Unsuccessful Attempt to Cut off Sheridan.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, June 22, } Via BALTIMORE, Thursday, June 23. }

The steamer Iolas has arrived from the White House, which place she left yesterday morning.

At six o'clock on the morning of the 20th instant, Gen. FITZHUGH LEE and WADE HAMPTON made an attack on our forces intrenched there, under Gen. ARMSTRONG.

The rebels charged upon our works, but were repulsed and driven back by our gunboats there, the Commodore Morris, Capt. BABCOCK, and two others, which opened a heavy fire on the rebels.

At seven o'clock the rebels, having succeeded in planting a battery of three guns in range, returned the fire upon our gunboats and land forces.

This artillery firing was kept up, as we learn by a subsequent arrival, until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

About noon the Commodore Morris threw a shell that exploded a rebel caisson, causing great confusion and having the effect of slacking the rebel fire very perceptibly.

The rebel loss was comparatively heavy.

Some prisoners captured say that they mistook our gunboats for transports, and had expected to capture our troops at the White House before Gen. SHERIDAN's command arrived, and then intercept his force, and, if possible, prevent his safe arrival at the White House.

In all these movements they were defeated.

Our loss was only three wounded—one mortally.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Gen. SHERIDAN's advance guard arrived at the White House, and at 5 o'clock the General arrived there with his entire command.

Yesterday morning, the first inst., there was some skirmishing among the pickets, and it was expected that there would be a general engagement.

Gen. GREGG had arrived and relieved Gen. ARMSTRONG, who had been previously ordered to report to Washington for duty.

During the commotion of the rebel attack, Gen. ARMSTRONG received a dispatch from Gen. GRANT to hold his position at all hazards till assistance arrived, which, by the aid of gunboats, he was enabled to do successfully.

Gen. ARMSTRONG arrived here to-day en route for Washington.

During the attack at the White House, a rebel shell penetrated the telegraph office, but the operator, Wm. BLISS, fortunately escaped.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 23.

A NON-CONCURRENCE.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Union,) reported from the Military Committee the bill for the examination of certain officers in the army, recommending a non-concurrence in the House amendments.

Agreed to.

THE POST-ROUTE BILL.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Union,) from the Post-office Committee, reported back the House Post-route Bill with various amendments, and it was passed.

PAY FOR HORSES LOST IN THE SERVICE.

Mr. WILSON, from the Military Committee, reported back the House bill to amend the act to provide for the payment for horses and other property destroyed in the military service. It allows pay to officers and soldiers for horses belonging to them when captured from them by the enemy while in the discharge of their duty. It was passed.

THE WESTERN DEPARTMENT.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Union,) from the Committee on Finance, reported back the House joint resolution amendatory of the act to provide for the deficiency in the appropriation to pay the men actually employed in the Western Department. Passed.

NEWSPAPER SUPPRESSION.

Mr. POWELL, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) submitted the following, which was ordered to be printed:

Whereas, a military order has been recently issued in the State of Kentucky, providing that the circulation in said State of the Cincinnati Enquirer, a newspaper printed and published in Cincinnati, Ohio, and whereas a free press is essential to maintain the rights and liberties of the people; therefore,

Resolved, That the President be requested to cause the aforesaid military order to be revoked, and that the President be further requested to issue such orders as will protect the military authorities from encroaching upon the freedom of the press in future.

REMISSION OF DUTIES.

Mr. COWAN, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) from the Committee on Finance, reported the bill to remit the duties on goods imported for the Sanitary and Christian Commission Fairs, with a substitute remitting the duties simply for the Chicago Sanitary Fair, and relieving the officers from the penalties for sales and lotteries without license, and it was passed.

MILITARY ARRESTS.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Union,) reported a bill for bail in certain cases of military arrests, with an amendment limiting the taking of bail to the several courts of the United States. The original bill included State Courts.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

He also reported adversely the bill to provide for claims against the Government for injury and destruction of property by the army of the United States or by military authority during the rebellion.

Also adversely on the House bill to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims and provide for the payment of certain demands for Quartermasters' Stores and the subsistence of the army.

CRIMES AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. RAMSEY, of New-York, (Union,) reported the bill prescribing the time within which indictments may be found against persons charged with crimes against the laws of the United States.

THE REVIVAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.

The House bill to repeal the Fugitive Slave Law came up as the special order.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) addressed the Senate at length in opposition to the measure. He said it was a declared object of the law to return slaves to their masters. This was clearly the intention of the framers of the Constitution; and it was an end of the question to say that these men intended to say that these provisions were intended to embrace slaves. "Persons bound to service or labor," was intended to mean African slaves. He argued that the Fugitive Slave Bill was entirely within the scope of the Constitution, and quoted largely to show that the framers of the Constitution intended that fugitive slaves should be rendered up. Otherwise, he said, Virginia and other Slave States would have never given up their imperial reign over the territory, which, since that time, has spread so widely. The men of that day, who have marched through the storms of the Revolution, accepted this grant in good faith, and not a man of them, to-day, if they could return to the earth, would have a soul which would not revolt at the outrage on good faith about to be perpetrated. That this measure proposed now was only another among the accumulating evidences of the degeneracy of the present evil times, and that any man understanding the history of this provision for the return of slave property and having sworn to support the Constitution could recklessly urge the repeal of these constitutional guarantees, was of those instances of moral profligacy and delinquency which could not be fathomed by the most degenerate of men. While the Senator from Massachusetts (SUMNER) cries aloud against the injuries done to the poor and oppressed African, he could show, as he had heretofore shown, that New-England had adhered to slave labor as long as she could make profit of it, and until she found that her climate was too rigid for it to be made profitable. Then she resorted to white labor as more profitable. We all know, however, that New-England continued the Slave-trade and the smuggling of slaves into Louisiana and the Lower Mississippi after the law prohibiting the Slave-trade went into effect. Mr. DAVIS then proceeded to show the inconsistency of those who, while contending for the equality of the African race expelled them socially. For his part, every emotion of his soul and every pulsation of his heart admonished him that he was of a superior race to the negro. The Senator from Massachusetts professes to believe the contrary. Why then, as he is a bachelor, has he not selected one of Africa's sable daughters and led her to the altar? [Laughter.] Mr. SAULSBURY moved the following, as a substitute for the bill: That no person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due, and Congress shall pass all necessary and proper laws for the rendition of all such persons.

Mr. SAULSBURY made an earnest appeal to the Senate to delay action upon this great question of changing our organic law until the country should get over its great national strife and men's heads had become cool. He insisted that this was no time to agitate such a question as repealing this law.

Mr. SAULSBURY's amendment was rejected—ayes 8, nays 28.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Maryland, (Union,) moved to strike out the following, clause: "That sections 3 and 4 of an act entitled, an act respecting fugitives from justice and persons escaping from the service of their masters," passed February 12, 1793. Rejected—22 to 17.

The bill was then passed, ayes 27, nays 12, as follows:

NAYS—Messrs. Buckalew, Carlile, Cowan, Davis, Hendricks, Johnson, McDougall, Powell, Riddle, Saulsbury, Van Winkle, Willey.

It is as follows, and only needs the signature of the President.

That sections 3 and 4 of an act entitled an act respecting fugitives from justice and persons escaping from the service of their masters, passed Feb. 12, 1793, and an act entitled an act to amend and supplementary to the act entitled an act respecting fugitives from justice, and persons escaping from the service of their masters, passed Feb. 12, 1793, passed September, 1850, and the same are hereby repealed.

MILITARY INTERFERENCE IN ELECTIONS.

The motion to reconsider the bill passed yesterday, to prevent military interference in elections, was taken up.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Union,) said that in time of war it was not competent to allow any open enemy of the United States to have the privileges of a State election. He held that the laws of the United States were and should be supreme in a time of war. This, though called a dangerous power, must, in times of war, be exercised, though it might be liable to abuse. What great power was not?

Mr. JOHNSON said: If the Senator's doctrine prevailed, he did not see how it mattered whether this rebellion was put down or not. He never heard before that the United States had a right to interfere with the elective franchise. Such principles announced in England would be considered as toppling off their institutions. Such a thing as military interference in elections had not been heard of in England since the time of HENRY VIII. Such a doctrine as this, if maintained, would subject us to the scorn of the statesmen of every enlightened nation of Europe. In the name of God and of the spirits of our fathers, who gave us these institutions, may we be protected from such a doctrine and policy? A Presidential election was close a hand, and if he voted, he expected to exercise his own judgment. But some man with the stars upon him, and clothed with a little brief authority, under the Senator's doctrine, might want some other than the man of my choice elected; and although he does not compel me to vote for his candidate, he says if you don't vote as I do, because you are a free man, I will shoot you. Such doctrine is abhorrent to every idea which American citizens have heretofore entertained of American freedom! The bill, as it stood, went further than he thought it should. But he implored the Senate not to go a step further, that we might thus be saved from the ruin of a military despotism.

Mr. HOWARD replied that the Senator had taken the extraordinary ground that the Government, in undertaking to decide who were its enemies, subjected itself to the scorn of the States of the Old World, and especially that beautiful Government of Great Britain, which he lauded so much. It was clearly the province of the Government to determine who its enemies were. This was not the province of a State.

Without concluding, Mr. HOWARD gave way, and at 4:30 o'clock the Senate took a recess until 7.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. GRIMES, of Iowa, (Union,) called up the House Bill incorporating the Young Men's Christian Association of Washington, and it was passed.

The bill incorporating the Colored Catholic Male Benevolent Society of Washington, was also passed.

THE COMMUTATION CLAUSE.

The bill of Mr. MORGAN, repealing the $300 commutation clause, was then taken up by a vote of 26 to 11.

Mr. WILSON moved an amendment, which he briefly advocated, providing that the draft be for the period of one year. The amendment was rejected by a vote of 12 to 18.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, (Union,) moved an amendment, providing that the draft be for not less than one nor more than four years.

Mr. WADE, of Ohio, (Union,) was not willing to give discretion to the military authority. If we drafted for one year it would be much more easy to get soldiers. He therefore favored the proposition to draft men for a short period.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Maryland, (Union,) said the two propositions now before the Senate were: First, that the Secretary should be allowed to call for men for a period not exceeding one year; second, for any period not exceeding three years.

The amendment of Mr. CHANDLER was rejected—ayes 16, nays 22.

Mr. MORGAN then offered an amendment to the Enrollment Bill, providing that in future calls the Government may call for a term not exceeding one year.

Mr. WADE favored the idea of calling out these men for a limited period, in order to reinforce our veterans in the field. He stated instances to show that green soldiers fought as well alongside of veterans, as veterans themselves.

Mr. WILSON said that the Secretary of War desired that we should repeal the commutation clause. The people did not understand what they had. He wanted to fill our armies with true and brave men, and at the same time we manufactures and commerce. In filling our armies we should exercise our reason, and not injure any interest of the country. Everything taught him that our laws should bear as lightly as possible upon our people. He believed that in 60 days we could put a man into the field for one year, to one for three years. So believing, he advocated a draft for one year; and not for the purpose, as had been indicated, of saving his section of the country from the burdens of the draft. He hoped that after the vote in the Senate and the manifestation at the other end of the Capitol, the Senate would not do what the country would consider a hard thing.

Mr. SPRAGUE, of Rhode Island, (Union,) argued that we should be governed somewhat by the policy the Secretary of War, who believed he had authority to draft for one year. But the real difficulty was that men could not be procured while the commutation clause stood in the way. It seemed to him that the views of the President and Secretary of War should be regarded.

The question was taken on Mr. MORGAN's amendment and was adopted by a vote of 25 yeas, against 14 nays.

NAYS—Messrs. Brown, Carlile, Chandler, Conness, Davis, Fessenden, Grimes, McDougall, Ramsey, Riddle, Sherman, Sprague, Trumbull, Wilkinson.

Mr. COLLAMER offered an amendment, which he explained, saying as the law stood, the drafted man had to pay such sum as the Secretary of War fixed for the procuration of a substitute not exceeding $300. He proposed that the sum be fixed at $500. There was not necessity for repealing that part of the statute which permitted a drafted man to procure a substitute.

Mr. SHERMAN remarked that as the Senate had just limited the draft for one year, he thought it no hardship to say the drafted man should serve for one year, or procure a substitute. The commutation money had been greatly wasted. Experience had shown that officers of the Government had been cheated. It had occurred in many instances that twenty-four hours after they had procured a substitute, they not only lost the drafted man and the substitute, but the money besides. The draft should be strictly and fairly enforced—a thing which the gentlemen at the other end of the avenue had never yet done, and it should be done without delay, without excuse, and irrespective of threats or mobs. The Government wanted more men, not more money.

Mr. HOWE said the money would not answer for one man unless it answered for every man. All knew that with money alone the war could not be carried on. The commutation clause had stood in the way of our success from the beginning of the war until now. He would not vote to exempt any man for money. A drafted man could engage a substitute just as well as the Secretary of War for him. We were in the fourth year of the war, contending day after day as to whether we would or not, with experience before us, allow a man with more money than courage to commute for military service. We must to clothe the Government with such authority as to call every able-bodied man to the achievement of victory at the tap of the drum.

Mr. DAVIS believed a war could not be very long continued against the feelings and judgment of the people and the will of the masses; and when they see a vast expenditure of treasure and blood, they shrink back appalled from the contemplation of a continuous prosecution of hostilities. A change had come over the spirit of the majority of the loyal people of the United States, and they desired to bring the war to a close. They had seen the powers of the Government greatly perverted, threatening their liberties. This was the deep conviction of the people, and it was not strange it should be so. At the commencement of the war, he was a enthusiast, but he was not one now. There were two thermometers, one in Congress and in the Executive Department, and the other in the people. A million of men have perished in this war, or been permanently disabled. The public debt is twenty-five hundred million dollars, and if the war be continued another year, eight hundred millions of debt will be added. With all the perversions of the objects of the war, and the usurpation of power—with all the perils it has brought upon the Constitution and the popular rights, he would prefer a thousand fold peace to the continuance of the war. For the reasons he had given, he was in favor of submitting this war to the will of the people. Congress, and not the President, was intrusted with the power to bring it to a close. He would say to Kentucky, the time has come when this bloody, destructive and revolutionary policy should stop, and that the people—the masters of the Government—to rise in their majesty and take affairs in their own hands.

Mr. HENDRICKS believed if a proper policy were adopted by the Government the three hundred dollar commutation clause would procure a soldier for one year more readily and with much less hostility than any other measure of the draft.

Mr. HOWARD said Congress had made a mistake in allowing any person to purchase his exemption from serving the cause of his country. Under the representation and strange eloquence those who were opposed to the war, had brought to make the law odious until they had almost produced civil war. He was in favor of calling out every able-bodied man whom the draft could reach. We should bear up with all reverence, never forgetting the value of our cause, and on all occasions exhibit a manly, patriotic, heroic spirit. He was much pained at the speech of the Senator from Kentucky, and to see him tottering, breaking down and giving up the hope of the contest, and expressing his willingness to make terms with the rebels. Was the Senator willing to make terms with the rebels? Was the Senator willing to get upon his knees to JEFF. DAVIS, and accept from him any terms of settlement of this controversy, in order to prevent the further shedding of blood? The rebels had not the slightest disposition to make terms short of the acknowledgment of their independence. Was the Senator willing to acknowledge a military despotism and perpetual war? Was he prepared for a divided empire and divided power? Was he disposed to break down the whole system of States, and destroy a once proud American name, and humble it to British manufacturing interests. In the name of God, was there an American citizen who was willing, for the sake of a temporary and delusive peace, to succumb to the assumed rebels? With courage and endurance, we should forever subdue the traitors. He thought the Senator was acting under a delusion. As for his constituents, they were for the war, cost what it might, and end when it might.

Mr. DAVIS replied, saying although he had worshipped the Union which was the altar upon which he had poured out his heart's affections, yet he was more ardently devoted to liberty, which he preferred to a Constitution and Union struck down by military despotism. Had not the present Executive given his deliberate and well-considered sanction to the revolutionary movement in the South? He referred to Senator WILSON as having as strong a mind and pure a heart as any man belonging to this body, and quoted from the remarks of the Senator to show that the latter had said a people had the right to change their executive form of government, and that the attempt to forcibly hold them in the Union would be subversive of the principles of the Government under which we live. He (DAVIS) did not go so far as the President.

[The subject was discussed up to the hour of adjournment, but the remainder of the proceedings had not reached us up to 2.30 A. M.—ED. TIMES.]

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 23.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

Among the bills passed this morning relating to the District of Columbia, was one authorizing a new street in Washington City, to be called Colfax-street.

The House passed the Senate bill amendatory of the law of March, 1863, which extends the time within which patentees who have neglected it may pay the final balance fees within six months from the passage of this act to secure their patents.

Mr. TRACY, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Military Affairs to inquire into the expediency and propriety of reporting a bill giving to soldiers who volunteered for less than three years and not less than nine months, the same bounty as is allowed by existing laws, etc. This refers to those who have died or may die in line of duty.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, of New-York, (Union,) said the committee was instructed to the same effect by his (FARNSWORTH's) resolution three or four weeks ago; but he had no objection to the committee again being instructed, and he hoped it would have a good result. The resolution was passed.

THE NEW LOAN BILL.

The House, in the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, resumed the consideration of the new Loan Bill.

Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, (Dem.,) called attention to the fact that the bill provides one per centum for the necessary expenses of engraving, printing, preparing and issuing the United States notes, Treasury notes, fractional currency and bonds, under discretion of the same to subscribers and purchasers. He said that only a few days ago $440,000 was appropriated for similar purposes, and as the whole amount to be printed under this bill was $614,000,000, the one per centum would make a sum total of over $4,000,000. It could be done for a great deal less. He himself would print the public money for one-tenth of that sum.

On motion of Mr. BROOKS, an amendment was made that the imprint of the seal of the Treasury Department shall be made in a room apart from the Printing Bureau.

Mr. FOSTER, of New-York, (Union,) offered the following as a substitute for the second section of the bill:

That the Secretary of the Treasury may issue, upon the credit of the United States, bonds of any denomination not less than one hundred dollars, payable in lawful money three years from the date thereof, and bearing interest not exceeding eight per centum per annum, payable semi-annually in lawful money, and may receive at par, therefor, the lawful money of the United States, or notes, certificates of indebtedness, or certificates of deposit, issued under any act of Congress.

And the Secretary of the Treasury, in addition to the total amount of bonds authorized by the first and second sections of this act, shall issue at par, in exchange for any coin, currency, notes, certificates of indebtedness, or certificates of indebtedness of the United States, bonds similar to those therein before in this second section authorized, in denominations of not less than one hundred dollars, or of the denominations similar to those authorized by the first section, and payable five years from date with interest as therein set forth.

And the Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized to issue in lieu of any bonds heretofore authorized by law and not now issued in pursuance thereof, bonds similar to and in the denominations hereby authorized.

All Treasury notes other than United States notes shall cease to be a legal tender in the payment of public or private indebtedness on and after the first day of October, 1864, and no Treasury notes made legal tender, other than United States notes, shall hereafter be issued or reissued, nor shall the total amount of United States notes, issued or to be issued, ever exceed four hundred millions of dollars, and such additional sum not exceeding fifty millions of dollars, as may be temporarily required for the redemption of a temporary loan.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, of New-York, said that the present advance in gold is not the result of speculation and is not to be obviated by temporary expedients, but by a return to practice as well as in theory to the policy of gold values established in 1792. With the amount of paper money in circulation, the issue of interest-bearing notes would add nothing to the aggregate value of paper money, and could only work mischief. The policy of 1862, of adhering to gold values, must be returned to, or the theory advocated by the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, adopted, namely: Repudiating the payment of interest in gold and relying entirely upon the issue of Government paper. The effect of the present inflation must soon become ruinous to the masses of the people. The fatal mistake of the Secretary of the Treasury has been in abandoning the popular six per cent. five-twenty loan and attempting to float a five per cent. bond, and upon its failure resorting to interest-bearing legal tender; and on the part of Congress, in not specially supplying an efficient system of taxation. It was, however, still possible, by adhering to correct natural laws, to restore the credit of the country to a healthy condition.

Mr. HOOPER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) briefly replied. He expressed the hope that the substitute offered by the gentleman from New-York (FOSTER) would not be adopted. He thought that there was a great deal of danger in accepting such an important proposition in this hasty way. He knew that the Secretary of the Treasury had sleepless nights over this bill.

Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, (Dem.,) said that the gentleman from Massachusetts (HOOPER) wished to give this bill the sanction of the Secretary of the Treasury. He (BROOKS) held in his hands three distinct bills, and he wanted to know which was the proper one.

Mr. HOOPER replied—The bill now under consideration was based on that sent hither from the Secretary of the Treasury, and was the same bill, with some slight alterations.

Mr. BROOKS remarked that there were essential changes.

Mr. HOOPER would like the gentleman to point out one.

Mr. BROOKS said that the third bill was from the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. HOOPER replied that the Chairman reported his substitute on his own responsibility.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, said he did not agree with the majority of the Committee of Ways and Means, and hence he had offered a substitute for the first section of the bill.

The question having been taken, the substitute of Mr. FOSTER for the second section of the bill, as given above, was adopted by Yeas, 66; Nays, 42.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) said, while advocating his amendment, that those who attribute the rise in gold to gambling are poor statesmen. Instead of passing the gold bill to restrain speculations, it would be better to take away the demand for gold, for no bill could reduce it a cent. The Secretary of the Treasury had said, in his wisdom, that the principal of the five-twenties is payable in coin; but the courts in three States had not so decided.

Mr. STAUFFER, of Ohio, (Union,) said he had a conversation with the Secretary of the Navy, who believes the payment of the principal is to be in gold.

Mr. STEVENS replied that such was not the law, which says that the interest is payable in coin, and implies about the principal. The latter is payable in currency. He briefly replied to Mr. FOSTER, showing that the Committee of Ways and Means had faithfully performed their duty in providing the bills necessary for revenue, and then expressed the opinion that all the trouble rose from the extraordinary demand for gold; for gold is not now currency. In 1792, the banks failing to loan the Government money, we were driven to the necessity of issuing paper tenders. No system ever worked better in this, or any other country. He supposed that specie payment would not be resumed for ten years to come. During the great Napoleonic war the Bank of England suspended specie payments from 1796 to 1822. Whoever looks for a more speedy resumption in this country, was, in his judgment not wise, and had studied history to but little profit. He deprecated the present policy of paying the interest of the debt in gold, and asserted that if this should continue with an increase of debt the Government would fail. It was a fatal policy which rests like an incubus upon us, and gold would continue to go up, as he had predicted, until the Government cannot procure its coin. The way to save the country from repudiation is that he then explained the character of his amendment, which was to authorize the borrowing of four hundred millions of dollars, and to issue these for coupon or registered bonds of the United States, redeemable at the pleasure of the Government after any period not less than five nor more than forty years, and if deemed expedient, made payable at any period not more than twenty years from date payable in coin, such bonds are to be of such denominations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, not less than fifty dollars, and bear an annual interest not exceeding eight per centum, payable semi-annually in currency.

Mr. HOOPER, of Vermont, (Union,) expressed his surprise at the proposition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and said in the course of his remarks, if the interest was to be paid in currency, the interest would double or treble as the currency decreased in value. He did not believe we could continue to carry on the war at this extraordinary rate of expenditure. But this remark was not applicable to the present year or the year thereafter. With the passage of the revenue bills now pending, we shall have ample security for getting money enough and paying as we go, our interest on bonds and other securities.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, of New-York, (Union,) said he had not intended to speak on this question. He now felt a desire to do so. He believed the bill would go over till to-morrow, in order that he might have the opportunity. He believed, and thought he could demonstrate, that the position of the gentleman from Pennsylvania was unsound and fraught with mischief toward the credit and finances of the country.

Mr. DAVIS, of New-York, (Union,) in the course of his remarks said, as a final proposition, he would contain the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, but we have to deal with facts as they are. The country has been committed to a policy different from that now suggested. He had confidence in the strength and resources of the country to ultimately meet every obligation. We should vote in accordance with the wishes of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. ARNOLD, of Illinois, (Union,) briefly opposed the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FRANK, of New-York, (Dem.,) referring to the debate, said the views of the Democratic members expressed had made some impression on the Republican side of the House.

The Committee of the Whole acted on, and agreed to, Mr. STEVENS' substitute for the first section—ayes 73, nays 51.

The House, however, at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, refused to concur in the action of the committee, by a vote of 59 against 60.

The House also refused to concur in Mr. FOSTER's substitute for the second section, by a vote of 44 against 81.

The bill was then passed without a division, the yeas and nays having been demanded and refused.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow from time to time, on the credit of the United States, $400,000,000; to issue therefor coupon registered bonds of the United States, redeemable at the pleasure of the Government, after any period not less than five nor more than thirty years, or, if deemed expedient, made payable at any period not more than forty years from date; the bonds to be of such denominations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, not less than fifty dollars, and to bear an annual interest not exceeding six per cent., payable semi-annually in coin. The Secretary of the Treasury may dispose of such bonds or any part thereof, and of any bonds commonly known as five-twenties, remaining unsold in the United States, at par or if he shall find it expedient in Europe, at any time, on such terms and conditions as he shall deem most advisable, for lawful money of the United States, or, at his discretion, for Treasury notes, certificates of indebtedness or certificates of deposit issued under any act of Congress; bonds, Treasury notes, and other obligations of the United States, to be exempt from taxation by or under State or municipal authority. The Secretary of the Treasury may issue on the credit of the United States, in lieu of an equal amount of bonds authorized by the preceding section, and as a part of said loan, not exceeding two hundred millions of dollars in Treasury notes of any denomination not less than ten dollars, payable at any time not exceeding three years from date, or if thought more expedient, redeemable at any time after three years from date, and bearing interest not exceeding the rate of seven and three-tenths per centum, payable in lawful money at maturity, or at the discretion of the Secretary semi-annually. Treasury notes may be disposed of by the Secretary of the Treasury on the best terms that can be obtained for lawful money, and each of them so shall be made payable, principal and interest, shall be a legal tender to the same extent as United States notes, for their face value, excluding the interest, and may be paid to any creditor of the United States at their face value, excluding interest, or to any creditor willing to receive them at par, including interest; and any Treasury notes issued under the authority of this act may be made convertible, at the election of the Secretary of the Treasury into any bonds issued under the authority of this act. The Secretary of the Treasury may redeem and cause to be cancelled and destroyed any Treasury notes or United States notes heretofore issued under the authority of previous acts of Congress, and substitute in lieu thereof an equal amount of Treasury notes such as are authorized by this act, or of other United States notes of such denominations as shall be deemed expedient, not exceeding one dollar; provided the total amount of bonds and Treasury notes authorized by the first and second sections of this act shall not exceed $400,000,000, in addition to the amounts heretofore issued; nor shall the total amount of United States notes, issued or to be issued, ever exceed $400,000,000, and such additional sum not exceeding $50,000,000, as may be temporarily required for the redemption of the temporary loan; nor shall any Treasury note, bearing interest, issued under this act be a legal tender in payment or redemption of any money issued by any bank, banking association or banker, to circulate as money. The interest on all bonds hereafter issued, payable annually, may be paid semi-annually, and in lieu of such bonds authorized to be issued, the Secretary of the Treasury may issue bonds bearing interest payable semi-annually, and may also, in exchange for Treasury notes heretofore issued, bearing 7 3-10 per centum interest, beside the six per centum heretofore authorized. Like bonds of all the denominations in which such Treasury notes have been issued, the interest on such Treasury notes, after maturity, shall be paid in lawful money, and they may be exchanged for such bonds at any time within three months from the date of the notice of redemption by the Secretary of the Treasury, after which the interest on such Treasury notes shall cease. So much of the law, approved March 3, 1864, as limits the loan authorized therein to the current fiscal year, is repealed, and the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow money, and issue therefor bonds or notes, conferred by the first section of said act, shall cease on and after the passage of this act. The Secretary of the Treasury may authorize the receipt as a temporary loan of United States notes or the notes of National banking associations on deposit, for not less than thirty days on sums not less than $50, by the Assistant Treasurers of the United States or depositaries designated for that purpose other than National banking associations, who shall issue certificates for deposit in such forms as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, bearing interest not exceeding six per centum annually, and payable at any time after the expiration of ten days from the date of deposit and after ten days' subsequent notice, which time and notice be waived by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury may increase the interest on deposits at less than six per cent. to that rate, or on ten days notice to depositors he may diminish the rate of interest on the public interest may require; the aggregate of such deposits shall not exceed 150,000,000, and the Secretary of the Treasury may issue, and shall hold in reserve for payment of such deposits, United States notes not exceeding fifty millions of dollars, including the amount already required in such payment; and the United States notes so held in reserve shall be used only when needed, in his judgment, for the prompt payment of such deposits on demand, and shall be withdrawn and placed again in reserve as the amount of deposits shall again increase.

At 5 o'clock the House adjourned.

TURF RECORD.

The Great Trot at Fashion Course on Wednesday.

ROBERT B. FILLINGHAM THE WINNER IN THREE STRAIGHT HEATS.

In the TIMES of yesterday was published a brief epitome of the result of the second and last of the great contests between those renowned champions of the trotting turf Robert B. Fillingham, Gen. Butler and John Morgan. In that account occurred a typographical error. The time of the second heat was two thirty-six, and not two twenty-six, as was printed.

The intense excitement, which prevailed at the previous contest on the 15th, when they went in harness, and Butler won, Fillingham being distanced most unfairly for the foul driving of McLAUGHLIN, culminated in the second contest last Wednesday. Reports had been current for several days previous that Fillingham would not be "in the plan that he would not have "a fair show" on the Fashion Course. The simple absurdity of such rumors is best evidenced by the patent fact that he did start, did have a fair show, and won with remarkable ease. Notwithstanding these idle rumors, in the pools sold in the City on Monday and Tuesday evenings Fillingham had the call of Butler, at an average odds of five and six to four, whilst the nominal value placed on John Morgan proclaimed the idea that he would be found at the front on the day—now was he.

LATE SOUTHERN NEWS.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

"GEN. GRANT'S LINE."

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 15.

"I propose to fight it out on this line, if it takes all the Summer." These were the words of Gen. GRANT when near Spottsylvania Court-house. The letter from Spottsylvania Court-house to Richmond would, even, through Spottsylvania, Hanover and Hanover Counties; thence he has followed, passed through Caroline, King William, Hanover, New-Kent and Charles City, to the deep water of the James River, eighty miles by water, and thirty by land from Richmond. His army is at Westover and Harrison's Landing. He tries Hooker's, Sumner's and McClellan's lines, combining all these and now rests on the James River, at the very spot to which McClellan was driven just two years ago. He may have reached his general position by water, without the demoralization consequent upon his heavy repulses. His generals know in advance for what they are to labor, and they know that of Gen. Lee's they have not accomplished anything whatever toward the object of his campaign.

He can now unite with Butler at Bermuda Hundred, and, by combined operations, start a fresh campaign for the possession of Richmond—both of which he might have done unmolested in May, and with an army nearly 100,000 stronger than at present.

His battles in the Wilderness and at Spottsylvania Court-house were upon his original line. For one week they indicated by himself, he slided off that line down into Hanover County; and at Cold Harbor, a place very familiar to the Army of the Potomac, he fought several battles and many skirmishes; but again, for rescue and succor, water, he doubtless fully appreciates, he moves away between two suns, like a thief in the night, through New Kent and Charles City Counties to the James River. Ghost of Jomini, hail to—Is this state?

The raiding party under Gen. Hunter has met with some success in the valley. Having defeated Gen. Jones, it appears that Lynchburg is threatened, threatening devastations in the Lower Valley. The southwestern portion of the State may be the object of the raid. Much damage to railroads may be done before a sufficient force can be sent to drive them away. Sheridan's cavalry, though detached, may require still the presence of Gen. Hancock.

The latest information from the United States gold at 190½, and represents very great dissatisfaction at fighting throughout that country with the rebellious at Lincoln and Grant. Gen. Grant's movement towards on the Fredericksburgh Line. It is true his move was far away from that line when the resolutions were made; that the public were acquainted with the reports of Sumner, that every sound of Grant's name could be heard in Richmond. Yet, day succeeded day, by Grant's approaches, and Richmond, Gen. Grant is far away, and the abandonment of McClellan's line will send gold up to 225 in New-York.

VIRGINIA.

From the Petersburgh Express, June 15.

Virginia, for three years, has been subjected continually to the ravages of war armies marching from the Potomac to the Rappahannock, and the James River, and we have known that the whole of her territory through which these marches have been made has been more or less wasted, and thousands of her citizens stripped of their all. Besides this her magnificent valley has been also devastated from time to time by smaller but not less villainous commands, whilst raiding gangs have in nearly every direction been robbing, burning and destroying everything they could lay their hands on. Yet for all this, she is still the brave old independent Virginia that she was before the first gun of the war was fired. She still confronts her ruffian invaders and bids defiance in their teeth. Still does the proud spirit worthy of the grandeur of her historic reputation and of her escutcheon, with its inspiring motto, and motto, The sword is sovereign by multitudes murdered—her fields may be desolated, her cities burned and villages given to the flames—her works of art and of taste pass the great destroyer of humanity, all over and away—yet the spirit never to be conquered by the arms of the brutal enemy she is now confronting with.

THE FOOD QUESTION.

THE RICHMOND MARKETS.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 15.

The owners of a number of country carts that used to bring supplies to this market have of late ceased to come, though the markets are by no means destitute of such vegetables as are common to the country. By inquiry we learn that so many carts have recently start for this city, but stop before reaching their destination, haul up at some convenient place to the proceeds of the corporation limits, sell out their grain, and put for home instantly. The general cause alleged, with some show of justice, we presume, that when they come into the city they are bothered half out of their wits to get out again. When applying for a passport they have to produce somebody who knows them, as a voucher, a thing not always easy to do. Then, again, they say they are stopped at every corner of the street, and subject to cross-questioning by the military guards, whose impertinities are not slow to take a hint. Thus, they say, they pass the city from the south side stop at the other, and of Mayo's bridge; a number of those from Hanover and Henrico stop power to the Hanover Branch. This cause makes vegetables dearer than they otherwise would be. Would it not be well, for the military authorities to assess these people when they come they will not be annoyed? We want provisions of all kinds in the city. If the stock were plenty prices would be reasonable enough. Even with an admitted scarcity the decline in the prices of many articles is noticeable.

PRICES AND PROVISIONS.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 13.

The scarcity of money, and the discomfiture of Grant, have worked together on the market for the past few days in a very encouraging manner. The manifest tendency of the prices is downward, but there is a slowness about it which indicates that it may hitch and halt upon the slightest provocation. The scarcity of provisions is and has been the apology for high prices for more than two years, and unless that difficulty can be modified or removed, "living prices" will be a long time coming. If the Government authorities will allow the free introduction of provisions of all kinds into the Richmond market, the object would be accomplished. A large supply could in a short time be accumulated, and prices would be brought down to a comparatively reasonable standard. Merchants and country people are alike fearful of the impressing officer, and in the present state of transportation the difficulties under which they labor in affording supplies to the community are too apparent to require comment.

COFFEE AND CANDLES.

From the Petersburgh Express, June 13.

Messrs Farrell & Box sold at auction yesterday seven barrels of prime coffee, at $10 25@$10 37½ per pound. This shows a decided decline in the price of this luxury.

At the same time and place one barrel of whiskey, two years old, containing thirty-three gallons, was sold at $100 per gallon, or $3,300 for the barrel.

Milch cows brought from $840 to $890 each, and a three-year old fatty sold for $900.

THE REBEL CONGRESS.

MR. MEMMINGER TO RESIGN.

In the House of Representatives, June 14, Mr. Foote said that he would like to introduce a resolution inquiring of the Committee on the Judiciary what has become of his resolution concerning Mr. Memminger. He understood that the gentleman was authorized to make a statement in reference to Mr. Memminger, which would set the matter at rest, and preclude the necessity of his pressing the matter further.

Mr. Conrad said that he did not think that, under the circumstances, he ought to answer the question of the gentleman from Tennessee. It would not be just to the Secretary of the Treasury to make a statement which might indicate a desire to avert the threatened motion directed against him, and if the gentleman had intimated his intention to make such a motion, he must decline answering the question.

Mr. Foote said he withdrew his remark, and hoped the member from Louisiana would repeat the statement made some time ago as to the intentions of the Secretary.

Mr. Conrad said, after what had just fallen from the member from Tennessee, he had no objection to repeat the statement which he had made some time ago, which was that, some time previous, the Secretary of the Treasury had declared to him that it was the intention to resign his office at the end of the present session. It was proper to add, however, that this declaration was made some time before the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee, and had no reference to the action of this House in regard to him, but was a casual remark, dropped by him in a conversation, which he (Mr. C.) had with him, in reference to matters then pending before the committee.

Mr. Foote said that he was authorized to say that a member of the Senate had the same declaration of Mr. Memminger that he intended to resign his office, and that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee had the same statement from the Secretary's own lips. This being the case he did not press his resolution.

Mr. Russell, on the part of the committee appointed to act in conjunction with the Senate committee, reported to wait on the President, and inform him of the readiness of the House to adjourn, reported that the President states that he had nothing further to communicate, save the approval of several bills which he was now examining. The President desires to express his wish for the health and happiness of the members, and their safe return to their homes, and that he had hopes that before the meeting of the next Congress our country will have surmounted the difficulties and dangers which surround it, and Providence will have given us bright and happy prospects.

The hour of 3½ o'clock having arrived, the Speaker announced the House of Representatives adjourned sine die.

THE BATTLE WITH SHERIDAN.

Through a gentleman who left Gen. Hampton's headquarters at 2 o'clock on Sunday evening, June 22, the Richmond Sentinel has the following statement of the late operations near Louisa Court-house:

"The fight on Saturday was between Fitz Lee's division and the enemy. It commenced about 4 mile to the right of the Louisa Court-house, and was very hotly contested. Finally our cavalry drove the enemy about two miles, capturing a considerable number of prisoners, a number of pieces of artillery and fourgons. The number of horses in drove the artillery, it was disabled and abandoned. The caisons were brought off. Our informant did not know the number of prisoners captured here, but marching under guard, four abreast, the column was about three hundred yards long and in close order.

The prisoners reported that Gen. Custer was wounded in the fight. Among those captured was his Adjutant. On our side, our informant names only a few of his own personal acquaintance, as follows: Privates Warren Rammer, Company D, Fourth Regiment, wounded badly in arm; John Tallaferro, Company H, Fourth Regiment, dangerously in groin; — Claggett, Company C, Fourth Regiment, and Wm. Horton, both severely.

A party of the enemy, about a hundred and fifty in number, struck out to the south of the railroad, but peacefully on a raid; but before they knew of their danger, they rode into Gen. Harrison's embrace, and were captured to the last man. These are in addition to the prisoners above spoken of.

At 3 o'clock Sunday, fighting was in progress between Hampton and the enemy. The general position of the battle was upon the railroad between Louisa Court-house and Trevillian's, five miles beyond. Our pickets held Trevillian's. Hampton, with his command, was near Mechanicsville, or on the enemy's south flank. Fitzhugh Lee was on his north flank and rear.

Sheridan's men were without rations, and doubtless expected, like Hunter, in the valley, to live by robbing the people.

Our soldiers are said to have fought with great gallantry. The combat was mostly at very close quarters, and the wounds in consequence are generally severe.

HUNTER'S OPERATIONS.

MR. HUNTER'S GREEN—MONEY RETALIATES.

From the Petersburgh Express, June 15.

On commencing his movement up the valley, Hunter published a proclamation to the effect that, in case his supply trains were interrupted by Confederate forces, he would destroy all houses and property of citizens within five miles of the scene of action. His threat, however, does not seem to have had the desired effect, as the following statement will show:

On the night of the 20th inst., Major Gilmore pounced upon one of Hunter's trains in the vicinity of Newmarket and destroyed fifteen wagons heavily laden with commissary stores. One of the wagons was filled with medicines, and would, could it have been brought off, have made a valuable prize.

In retaliation for this act and under the provisions of his proclamation, Hunter proceeded to burn and destroy, but had scarcely begun his infernous work when Moseby came down like a thunder-clap on the incendiaries. Four or five houses had already been burned in New-Market and vicinity. One of Hunter's men was caught with a torch in his hand, proceeding to fire a dwelling. He was taken back, tried by court-martial, hanged, and left in the midst of the charred timbers and half-burned rafters, and on the heartbreaking, blackened with desolation, he paid the debt of his iniquity with a bullet through his heart. It was debated whether retaliation should not extend to some half dozen other prisoners, but it was considered that the one lesson was sufficient to reach Hunter's understanding, and enable him to comprehend the fact that he had altogether mistaken the character of the men with whom he proposed to deal. He sent a communication to Hunter, announcing the execution as stated.

A RAID ON THE SOUTH-SIDE RAILROAD.

From the Petersburgh Express, June 15.

Through the telegraph operator at Sweet Creek, we learned at six early hour yesterday, that Concord Station, on the South-Side Railroad, twelve miles this side of Lynchburgh, was visited by a band of Yankee raiders on Monday night at 12 o'clock. They numbered about 150, some clad in Confederate uniform, and represented themselves on entering the place as a portion of Gen. Imboden's command. Their acts, however, soon gave the lie to their words, as they proceeded to burn the depot, tear up the track, and destroy the little Government property in the vicinity. They cut down two or three telegraph poles, and destroyed but a few feet of wire. They left before the dawn of day, proceeding in the direction of Lynchburgh, from whence they came. The damage was repaired in a few hours, so far as the telegraph is concerned, and the other damage can and will be repaired to-day.

GEORGIA.

A RAID REPULSED IN A NEW QUARTER.

Hon. Rosr. H. May, Mayor of Augusta, Ga., under date of June 11, issues the following proclamation to the people of that city, and the surrounding counties and neighboring districts of South Carolina:

From information received from Maj.-Gen. Jones, commanding at Charleston and Savannah, there can be no doubt that the enemy are now actively preparing for a raid upon the City of Augusta. This information has also been conveyed to me from other sources whose reliability cannot be questioned. It is therefore my duty to call upon all the residents of the County of Richmond and the surrounding counties to repair to Augusta without a day's delay, and report to Maj. L. P. Graham, commanding the local forces, for assignment in the companies now organized, or for organization in new companies. Arms, ammunition and accoutrements will be furnished by Col. Rains to all.

That there will be no hesitation on the part of all within reach of Augusta who are capable of rendering service in this trying emergency, I am convinced. Citizens, strangers, refugees of all ages, have now an opportunity of demonstrating in some slight degree the devotion they have to our great country by contributing to the defence of one of the most important points in the Confederacy. It is no time for delay, fellow-countrymen, or for giving way to alarm—let us do our whole duty, conscientiously and calmly, and leave the rest to God.

The enemy will be opposed step by step, in his advance from the coast by our forces there. Every foot of his path will be marked with blood. Let us, then, constitute a force here that will reinforce our brave defenders, in the event of their being compelled to fall back from Augusta, and make every exertion to preserve from destruction our beautiful city and the mighty interests the Government has confided in our fidelity and courage.

PROMOTIONS AND ASSIGNMENTS.

ARRIVAL OF CAPTURED YANKEES.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 16.

The recent departure of two large regiments of captured Yankees for Georgia has reduced considerably the number of that class of our population. The number that remains, however, is still large enough to assure us that the Yankees are trying to get into the city, even if they have to come as captives. Late Monday evening, about 200 were received and locked at the Libby. Nine of them were taken of "Johns' Store"—he down while overhauling horse stock in trade. The balance were arrested near Bottom's Bridge. Yesterday, 37 were received at the Provost Marshal's office in this city, and sent to the Libby. Of this number, 4 were captured at Bottom's Bridge, near the White House, and 6 at Old Church, in Hanover. None of the prisoners said to have been captured by Gen. Hampton, on Sunday, near Trevillian's, have yet arrived in this city.

"A GOOD SIGN."

From the Petersburgh Express, June 15.

The authorities at New-York would not permit any papers to go out to the Bohemian by the last steamer to Nassau outside of the regular mails. Indeed, the greater portion of all mail matter, English and American, was detained in New-York. Grant's loss up to the 31st ult. was popularly estimated at figures ranging from 60,000 to 70,000.

Naval.

THE IRON-CLAD PURITAN.

Another unsuccessful attempt was made yesterday to launch the iron-clad Puritan. As there is evidently some bad feeling about the matter, we do not intend to assign any cause, as everybody differs on the subject. A 100 ton ram, and a hydraulic pump of equal force, were used in vain. The ship will probably be left some days in statu quo.

AN IRON-CLAD DEPARTMENT.

Chief Engineer James W. King, United States Navy, left this City on Monday to assume complete control of all the United States iron-clad war steamers building west of the Alleghany Mountains. The iron-clad portion of our navy may now be said to be divided into two departments, one at the east of the Alleghanies, superintended by Rear Admiral Goldsborough, and the other as regarded.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Arrest of the Navy Agent.

Mr. Isaac Henderson, late Navy Agent in this City, was arrested on a charge made under the Sub-Treasury Act of 1846, which provides that "if any officer charged with the disbursement of public moneys, shall accept or receive, or transmit to the Treasury Department to be allowed in his favor any receipt or voucher from a creditor of the United States without having paid to said creditor * * * the full amount specified in such receipt or voucher, every such act shall be deemed to be a conversion by such officer to his own use of the amount specified in such receipt or voucher."

The punishment affixed to the offence is imprisonment for from six months to ten years, and a fine equal to the amount of money embezzled.

The following is the affidavit on which the arrest was made:

Southern District of New-York, ss.—Joseph L. Savage, at present residing at No. — Clinton-avenue, in the City of Brooklyn, State of New-York, by occupation a merchant, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That on or about the sixteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, Isaac Henderson, of the City of New-York and State of New-York, then and there being the Navy Agent of the port of New-York, duly appointed, qualified and sworn, and then and there being an officer of the United States, charged with the disbursement of public moneys as such Navy Agent, and so being charged with the disbursement of public moneys as aforesaid, did accept and receive from him, the said Joseph L. Savage, he, the said Joseph L. Savage, then and there being a creditor of the United States, a receipt and voucher for the sum of twelve thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars and fifty-six cents, the said receipt and voucher being in the words and figures following, to wit:

The week's business in Butter and Cheese, Messrs. M. W. SEARS & Co., in their regular report for the WEEKLY TIMES, notice that: "The receipts of Butter during the past week have falled off largely, and under the influence of a good healthy demand, the market is well cleaned of all the fine lots of State and Western Reserve. The deliveries of this class are generally very firm in their views, and steadily refuse to part with their desires of Butters unless at prices that would pay a handsome fine to receivers. Harvesting and hot weather will soon begin, during which period dairymen usually prefer holding their Butter in the dairy-room. The inference is plain that our market will be poorly supplied with Butter until the last October is passed, unless the market takes will advance to meet the pretensions of dairyman. Western shippers and packers of Ohio Western Butters are confirmed in their views of holding back stock for high rates by the great success that attended a similar movement last season; consequently we cannot look for any immediate influx of that class of goods. Orange, Jersey and other country pails of similar grade are in full supply, but all arrivals are promptly cleared at very full prices. Our quotations of last week are nominally unchanged, and the market is completely unsettled by the operation of gold, but by uncertainment and uncertainty produced in the market by the anticipated effect of the 'Gold Bill' on the values of property. The market closes with great firmness, and with a decided upward tendency. Orange and Essex, fresh, pails, 26c.@29c.; State and Pennsylvania, fresh, pails, 25c.@27c.; State, firkins, Yellow, 40c.@42; State, half-firkin tubs, 34c.@36c.; state, Welsh tubs, 32c.@35c.; Western firkins, Yellow, 32c.@35c.; Pennsylvania, Yellow firkins, 30c.@32c.; Pennsylvania, Yellow half-tubs, 33c.@34c.; State firkins, Light colored, 32c.@35c.; Western firkins, Light colored, 30c.@32c.; State and Western firkins, Mixed colors, 28c.@30c. ₩ ℔. The receipts of Cheese since our last have been a fair average quantity. The demand for export has been active during the week, and, under the influence of the recent heavy advance in the rates of Gold and Sterling Exchange, the activity in the market has measurably increased, with an upward tendency to prices. Our quotations are unchanged: State Dairies, factory made, fine, 16c.@16½c.; State Dairies, factory made, fair to good, 15c.@17½c.; State Dairies, extra quality, 17c.@17½c.; State Dairies, fair to good, 13c.@16½c.; Dairies of common, poor and skimmed, 10c.@12c.; Western Reserve, good to prime, 12c.@16c.; English Dairy, Eastern, 16c.@16c.; English Dairy, Western, 16c.@15c.; Pineapple, 16c.@17½c.

TALLOW—Sales since our last, 103,500 lbs., at 15½c.@16c. ₩ ℔.

WHISKY—Sales have been reported since our last of 2,500 bbls., in lots, at $1 65@$1 70, closing at $1 65@$1 68 ₩ gallon.

FREIGHTS—The market has been somewhat unsettled to-day. For Liverpool, the engagements include 200 bbls. Flour at 10½d.; 30,000 bushels Wheat at 4d.@4½d.; 80 hhds. Tallow at 42s. 6d., and by steamer 10,000 bushels Wheat at 7d., and 3,000 boxes Cheese at 30s.; also, by a British brig, a cargo of Molasses at 22s. 6d. For London, 100 hhds. Tobacco at 37c. 6d.; 45 hhds. and 227 boxes Sugar at 20s. For Cadiz, a foreign bark, with West India hogshead and heavy barrel Staves at $30, and heavy pipe Staves at $37. NEW SKIRT FOR 1864.

A NEW AND GREAT INVENTION IN HOOP SKIRTS.
THE DUPLEX ELLIPTIC (OR DOUBLE) STEEL SPRING,
J. I. & J. O. WEST, NO. 97 CHAMBERS-ST., NEW-YORK,
Are the owners of the patent and exclusive manufacturers of this

J. N. BRADLEY'S
PATENTED DUPLEX ELLIPTIC STEEL SPRING SKIRTS.

This invention consists of Duplex (or two) Elliptic Steel Springs, ingeniously braided lightly and firmly together, making a lighter, more graceful, more flexible and durable spring ever used, enabling the wearer, in consequence of its great elasticity and lightness, to place and fold the skirt when in use as easily and with the same convenience as a silk or muslin dress. Entirely obviates the very serious objection to hoop skirts, viz.: the annoyance to the wearer as well as the public, especially in crowded assemblies, carriages, railroad cars, church pews, or in any crowded place from the difficulty of contracting them to occupying a small space. This entirely removes the difficulty, while giving the skirt the usual full and graceful form, and is the lightest and most stylish and graceful appearance for the street, opera, promenade or house dress. A lady having enjoyed the pleasure, comfort and great convenience of wearing the Duplex Elliptic Spring Skirt for a single day, will never afterward willingly dispense with the use of them. They are the best quality in every part, and by far the lightest, most durable, comfortable and stylish Hoop Skirt in the market. They will be supplied to above, and ladies in most first-class retail stores in this City and throughout the different States.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The news from the armies this morning is very meagre. The latest intelligence from the army in front of Petersburgh represents everything as quiet, and that there had been no fighting since the rebel attack of Sunday night. The important movements in progress spoken of yesterday in Secretary Stanton's dispatch do not seem to have been developed yet. On Tuesday there was quite a lively fight at White House, between our forces there under Gen. Abercrombie, aided by one or two gunboats, and the rebel cavalry under Hampton and one of the Lees. The enemy were driven off when Kilpatrick's cavalry arrived before the fight was over, and sided in the repulse of the rebels. Gen. Sheridan now commands at White House.

There is no later news this morning from either Gens. Hunter or Sherman.

FROM EUROPE.

The steamship Pennsylvania, with dates to the 9th, and the Hansa, with news to the 8th, arrived at this port yesterday. They bring files of papers five days later than previously received, and their news is not so late as that per the Africa, at Halifax, by three days. We give elsewhere some items of general interest.

GENERAL NEWS.

The National Steamship Company's steamship Pennsylvania, with European dates to the 8th, and the Hansa, with dates to the 9th inst., arrived here yesterday. The main features of the news they bring have been anticipated. But we find some additional items of interest.

By arrival of the steamship Havana, we have news from Havana to the 16th inst., and from Galveston, Texas, to the 12th inst. Mejia and the French troops, said to have defeated Degollado, are now near Saltillo. Within thirty days it is thought the French troops will have occupied the entire western shore of the Rio Grande. Don Benito Leon, an officer of the Spanish navy, arrived in the Havana en route for New-York. The Sigle, the only newspaper in Havana which has defended the Union cause, was on the 17th inst. suspended and it is feared forever.

One of the engineers of the British blockade-runner Greyhound, which was captured off Wilmington, N. C., bound for Bermuda, is now in Boston, on his way to St. John, N. B., whence he proposes to proceed to Bermuda to again enter the rebel service. He stated that he had been imprisoned in Fortress Monroe five weeks, and while there had written to Lord Lyons, who procured his release upon the ground that he was a British subject.

Gen. Burbridge has declined to permit the rebel prisoners at Lexington to take the amnesty oath. Nor does he consider that the provisions of the Amnesty Proclamation extend to those who are skulking now in the woods, and whose friends propose that they should come in and reap the benefits of the Amnesty Proclamation. Burbridge knows how to deal with the rebellion in Kentucky. Let him now attend to the shoddy secessionists of Cynthiana.

Gen. Gardner, of Fort Hudson fame, who has been confined in Fort Lafayette since he arrived North, has been consigned to the care of Gen. Foster, at Hilton Head, as one of the officers who are to be placed under the fire of the rebels until Gen. Jones retracts his recent cowardly threat.

A rebel battery has been established at Tunica Bend, on the Mississippi, the fire of which on Thursday last disabled the gunboat General Bragg.

The last number of the London Quarterly presumes to quote the authority of Mr. Fox, Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, for the assertion that the United States steamer Vanderbilt paid for itself, during one of her unsuccessful cruises after the Alabama, no less than $400,000.

The subscriptions to the new $2,000,000 Bounty Fund Loan thus far amount to $114,000, of which the Bowery Savings Bank is recorded for $100,000, subscribed yesterday. Only a few more such subscriptions are needed to warrant the Volunteer Committee in reopening their rooms.

Madame Henriette Sulzer was yesterday brought before United States Commissioner Osborne, charged with having returned her income at $600, under the Revenue Law, while, as claimed, it is fully $4,000. Through a male friend, Madame S. stated that, although she sometimes received considerable sums, still, her actual average income was not more than returned. She claimed to have exhausted all her means in preparing to leave for Mexico to join an operatic troupe which was to perform there for the amusement of the new Emperor. Her case was referred to the Collector, and the examination was postponed until to-day.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Judge Russel, Anthony Williams was convicted of a felonious assault and battery on one Rosewater, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for one year, and to pay a fine of $250. Henry McLaughlin, a cyprian, pleaded guilty to an attempt to steal a gold watch from one Schmidt, and was sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months.

The orchestral and musical entertainment in aid of the relief fund of the Ladies' Home United States General Hospital drew an unusually large audience to the Academy of Music last evening. Stirring addresses were delivered by Revs. Dr. Foster, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Hon. J. T. Brady, Rev. E. H. Chapin, Wm. H. G. Fawcett, of Tennessee, and Parson Brownlow. Grafulla's Seventh Regiment Band added its splendid music to the other attractions of the evening.

A horrible case of child murder was revealed yesterday, on an inquest held by Coroner Wilhelmy. A girl named Mary Gerrity, aged three years and three months died, according to the testimony of several witnesses, from the effects of having been beaten on the head, face, body and limbs by its adopted mother, Mrs. Dora Clinton. The cruelties, according to the evidence, extended through two or three months. The surgeon who made the post-mortem examination, testified [illegible] face of deceased, besides many on the body and limbs. It was also stated, that for weeks before its death, it had received scarcely enough food to sustain life. Upon the rendition of the verdict by the jury, Mrs. Clinton and her husband, Wm. Clinton, were committed to the Tombs to answer for the crime of murder, the latter as an accessory.

A second attempt was made yesterday to launch the monitor Puritan, but failed. Now ways will have to be made, and it will be some two weeks ere another attempt to launch can be made.

William A. Bancker, whose fall from an upper window of the Custom-house we mentioned yesterday, died Wednesday night at the City Hospital.

The Gold Act excitement passed off yesterday in a large measure. The Gold Room has been abandoned and the Street freed from the half-hourly cannons of a military nature. The business in Gold at the Bullion offices attracted less notice than yesterday. There were more sellers at the advanced rates, and the market left off quiet at 208@210 ¥ cent. The Stock Exchange depressed. Money active. Some of the City Banks refused to certify the large checks of their dealers, except as good though the Clearing-house, to avoid a demand for Greenbacks.

General business was less active yesterday, especially in the line of Domestic Produce. Flour, Wheat, Cotton and Whisky were cheaper, Pork and Lard were advancing. Groceries attracted less attention. Transactions in other articles were restricted. Freights were moderately active; rates somewhat unsettled.

The Postponement of the Chicago Convention.

After weeks of terrible perplexity, it is at last decided to postpone. Probably no party was ever in so sore a strait. It was a question whether to take death lying or standing. Until the last two or three days, the disposition has been to stand. The thing seemed almost settled. But suddenly the courage has given way, and now the conclusion is to lie stock still.

The cause of this sudden collapse, we suppose, is the threatening demonstration of the Peace Democrats. The mass convention called by the Peace "Central Committee" was a formal notification to the party that if a stand was made at Chicago it must be made with front toward them, or they would cleave the party in twain instanter. The peace men had every appearance of being in dead earnest about this. The guardians of the party took alarm. They did not fancy its being made way with in that summary style. If death must come, they preferred it in some other fashion. This was natural enough. A philosopher well observes: "Fancy that thou deserved to be hanged, (as is most likely,) thou wilt feel it a happiness to be shot; fancy thou deservest to be hanged in a hair halter, it will be a luxury to die in hemp." Rather than be split in the manner threatened, the party is delighted to make no stand in Chicago, and, sinking passively, to be ground to the dust by the heels of the advancing Union host.

It can expect no other fate. No political party that ever existed, whatever its principle or spirit, could afford to remain unorganized until a campaign against it was three-fifths over. It has almost become a political maxim, that it is sure death to a party not to meet its rival at the outset. This must be done, too, with well-devised plan and well-compacted front. Mere guerrilla warfare amounts to nothing. The opposing movement must be thoroughly organized; must have a recognized leadership; must proceed with an absolute method; must have the stimulus of an esprit du corps, and a common enthusiasm. To refrain from organization, and to hold back from taking the field, is simply to enable the other party, if well organized and energetically led, to move on with a constantly accumulating power, and to sweep everything before it.

Of course, it is not to be supposed that politicians so experienced as those at the head of the so-called "Democratic" party, are ignorant or unmindful of this principle of party campaigning. They showed a full sense of it by the persistence with which they opposed all the persuasions of the peace wing of the party to allow a postponement of the convention. It was not until these persuasions had been turned into serious threats, that they finally yielded. When it became a certainty that the peace men would not abide any platform that could now be framed at Chicago, unless all its leanings were toward peace, the fatal impolicy of postponing the convention assumed quite another aspect. It resolved itself into a question of choice between modes of dying. To stand out against the peace men, was to provoke them to divide the party. To yield to the peace men such a platform as was demanded, would be to insure the utter overthrow of the party by the people. To postpone the convention to the time demanded would be to keep the party in the condition of a shifting mob for three of the most important months of the canvass, and to make it certain to be scattered like chaff when the encounter came.

Probably were Gen. Grant fortunate enough to be in a position to make the capture of Richmond certain by the Fourth, the backbone of the anti-peace men would have been so strengthened, that they would have ventured to defy the other wing, and would have gone on, without delay, to put up a good stiff war platform in Chicago, trusting to find support in the freshly stimulated war-spirit of the people. But that prospect did not come to relieve them from their dilemma. Therefore they resign the party to the demands of its Peace men and keep it still unorganized for two months longer. Doubtless they are not without some glimmering of hope that something may occur during that period to better the position of the party. If Gen. Grant should achieve a splendid success, they may imagine that even at so late a day they could make something of a rally on the war-path. If Gen. Grant should be unsuccessful, then it would cost them little to give up all their superficial concern for the maintenance of the war, and to follow the lead of the Peace Democrats, under the notion that the people might be prepared, by the reverses of the war, to accept a peace policy.

But all such flickerings of fancy in the minds of Army disbanded men amount to nothing. There is no earthly chance that the majority of the people will determine, between this and November, to intrust the destinies of the nation to the party which for three years has been giving so much aid and comfort, directly and indirectly, to the armed enemies of the nation. Grievous misfortune may come during this interval. War, however righteous the cause, is never secure from painful vicissitudes. The great Union party has never conditioned its support of the war upon its success within any particular period. It has committed itself unalterably to the struggle, through good fortune and through all fortune, until the last full triumph is achieved, whether that triumph come soon or late. Its unwavering faith is, that a cause so just, and so fraught with the most precious interests of humanity, however sorely it may be tried, must in the end prevail, unless it is cravenly abandoned or wickedly betrayed. In that faith, the party will go through this Presidential canvass with unshaken resolution, let what betide the great military campaigns now in progress. The people share that faith, and will sustain the party. This is just as certain as that the Government which is to be served is the government of the People. The national cause is their cause; and the Union party, which alone has identified itself with that cause, is their party. Thus upheld, the cause and the party are independent alike of all the machinations of the factious and all the shifts of the time-serving.

The Last Pretext for McClellan.

The World, in the course of a long and elaborate attempt yesterday to extract comfort and credit for Gen. McClellan out of the history of Gen. Grant's campaign in Virginia, makes the following statement:

"'But the spade!' Gen. Grant has blunted the edge of the ignorant derision of which the spade used to be made the butt. Gen. Grant always intrenches, as do also the rebels. It is a necessity caused by the introduction into war of rifled cannon, never before used except in the brief French campaign in Italy, when they did such terrible execution at the battle of Solferino. The long range of these guns does not permit opposing armies to lie encamped near each other without intrenchments, as they could before this destructive invention. The same terrible weapon has rendered it impossible to take fortified positions by assault. It has not once been done in this war. The reason is that the great range of rifled guns keeps the assailing party so long under fire that they are mowed down like grass under the scythe. Occasionally a million has been taken by assault, to be again abandoned; but no substantial advantage has been gained by this method. To Gen. McClellan belongs the credit of perceiving, at the very outset, this bearing of rifled cannon upon the art of war. What he saw at once, by a STRETCH of judgment resembling intuition, all our Commanders, taught by experience, now perceive and adopt. Thus in every part of his conduct which his critics have assailed triumphantly vindicated by the adoption of his judgment by his successors."

The World has made a great number of most unfortunate and ill-timed efforts to whitewash Gen. McClellan, but we doubt if any of them has been more unfortunate than the foregoing. The reason here given for the great use made of intrenchments by both armies in this contest, is pure fiction. Rifled cannon has, in reality, no more to do with it than breech-loading rifles. The fact is, that armies in this war do "lie encamped" far nearer to each other than they ever do in any European war, and so far from it being "impossible to take fortified positions by assault," they have been repeatedly taken in this way, or else surrendered for fear they would be taken. Witness Roanoke, Newbern, Fort Donelson, Arkansas Post and Missionary Ridge. It is true that assaults on fortified positions have been less frequently successful in this war than in most others, but this has not been due to rifled cannon, but to the extraordinary demonstration of the value of earthworks afforded by the siege of Sebastopol. Previous to that contest, little importance was attached by engineers to this species of defence. But the genius of Todleben taught the world that determined men can construct earthen forts under the enemy's fire, that may for all practical purposes be considered impregnable, inasmuch as they cannot be breached by any amount of battering. In fact, bombarding only strengthens them. It ought not to be forgotten, however, in mentioning this, that the first great example of what a handful of brave men can do in an earthen redoubt was afforded by the Turkish defence of the Arab Tobia, at the siege of Silestria, 1854, where 1,700 artillerymen held an earthwork of the simplest construction, and without any bomb-proofs, for six weeks, against the whole Russian army, 60,000 strong, and eventually compelled them to raise the siege. In short, the great use of earthworks, and not of rifled cannon, is the most remarkable feature of our war. There have been no extraordinary displays of artillery practice except Gillmore's at Charleston.

The assertion that in this contest "the great range of rifled guns keeps the assailing party so long under fire that they are mowed down like grass under the scythe," is ridiculously incorrect. The truth is that in no war have assaulting columns been able to approach fortified positions so closely under cover, without opening parallels, owing to the fact that all our operations are carried on in regions more or less thickly wooded. The great sweep of open plain or slope by which European forts are so generally surrounded, and on which an assaulting column comes under fire the moment it gets within range of the guns, are here never seen. The great difficulty with us, in fact, generally, is to clear enough space round our works to prevent the enemy jumping straight from behind the trees on to the parapet. So that we do not believe a single case has occurred in which long-range guns have rendered either our army or that of the Confederates the smallest service in repelling storming parties, that would not have been rendered fully as well by the old smooth bores. In fact, to sum up, there has been no war in which, owing to the nature of the country, rifled artillery has been of so little use in land operations as in this of ours. The supposition that their length of range can be of the same value in the Virginian and Tennessean forest and brush as on the open plains of Lombardy, cannot emanate from anybody who has ever given the matter much consideration.

Rosecrans said that all our battles were "bushwhacking," and so they are to a certain extent. All movements, or almost all, are made under cover of woods, and for this reason both armies intrench, every time they halt for the night, to avoid surprises, not, as the World supposes, to protect themselves against rifled cannon. The enemy cannot be seen at any distance from the camp, and it is necessary, therefore, to have cover to run to in case of sudden assault. Beauregard's camps at Shiloh, Bragg's at Murfreesboro and Jackson's at Chancellorsville, could not have been made at Waterloo or Solferino, for the simple reason that, on those fields, a column could have been seen two miles away. In fact, the matter is so plain and simple, that, though we by no means consider George B. McClellan more than a third-rate General, we feel satisfied that he was not such a fool as to take to the spade to protect himself against rifled cannon. He took to it because it was slow; gave him time to ruminate, and, as he imagined, would save him against crushing defeat—though in this he was mistaken.

The Navy and the Blockade.

The Post rejoins to our article of Monday last, by quoting a letter from the Charleston Courier, written by some rebel in Nassau to that journal, in which it is stated that "one thousand tons" of rebel bacon is spoiling in that port, and that rebel bonds are selling there at nominal prices; and from this letter the Post draws the conclusion that our statements are incorrect. Again it is our duty to correct misrepresentation, and to mend bad logic. We did not say that the Confederate bonds, generally, were equal to ours in Europe, but that their Cotton Loan was, whose only value consists in the fact that cotton, in the Southern States, is pledged for its payment, and that the blockade is of so inefficient a character that this cotton can come out to perform its pledged duty. Is not this true? And cannot the Post perceive that the utter worthlessness of the common bonds of the South makes the high value of their "cotton bonds" the more striking, since it is evident that there is no general responsibility behind them, but only the certainty that cotton can run the blockade? If Confederate bonds generally were worth as much as ours in Europe, the fact that these cotton bonds were also equally valuable would prove nothing—otherwise it proves that the blockade is worthless.

But, says the Post, the beef is spoiling in Nassau, and, therefore, the blockade is effectual. We should say that therefore the blockade runners find it more profitable to carry in guns and clothing, shoes and saltpetre, than food; and so we find, when we chance to catch one, that her cargo is not beef, but articles much more needed at the South, and with which they are slaughtering our armies.

There is, however, a sentence in the rebel letter which is of itself worth all the argument in the world on the subject. The writer says: "I fear that all our cotton will be taken away without giving back much substantial benefit, and we will be left at the close of the war without a bale for credit." And he is no doubt correct. The Confederates will lose all their cotton, and get but little except arms and materials which perish in war, and which will have no value when war is over. The rebels are at the mercy of the English, who pay as little as possible, and take as much as possible—themselves growing rich out of the difference. But the cotton goes out for all that, and, unless the rebels do follow the hint of their intelligent correspondent, and protect themselves, they will be left, as he says, when the war ends, without cotton or credit. But what a commentary is it on the blockade, that the rebels themselves are contemplating some means to prevent the outpouring of their cotton, which we are unable to restrain!

The correspondent of the Courier also says that "it is thought that there will be twenty-five or thirty vessels running between this place (Nassau) and Wilmington during the coming Summer"—so that it is evident that the business is increasing, and that its regularity is much greater than the regularity of the sailing of American vessels from this port to Europe. The Florida and Alabama, in effect, blockade New-York, so that no American vessels go out; but our entire navy cannot blockade Nassau so as to prevent two or three vessels a day from leaving it, laden with death to our armies and life to our enemies. And all this, not because we have not ships and men enough, but because the ships have no speed, and cannot overtake the runners which they can see.

As to the question of the recognition of blockade by foreign Powers, that would be done if we used a fleet of sailing vessels. The law of nations does not require us to catch blockade-runners, but to have a fleet on the station, which cannot be passed by an honest trader without being noticed. Earl Russell explained this to the House of Lords when the inefficacy of the blockade was urged on the English Government as an argument against it; and it is the law of nations.

Sumptuary Laws in England.—The state of public opinion in England on the question of sumptuary laws is illustrated in the division which took place in the House of Commons, on a bill introduced by a Mr. Lawson, empowering the parish authorities throughout the United Kingdom to prohibit liquor-selling within their several jurisdictions. In a House of 337 members the bill, after a short debate, was thrown out by a majority of 257, only thirty-five members voting for the second reading. Even the brief discussion which took place was carried on amid constant interruptions—so entirely was the feeling of the House, irrespective of party, in favor of a speedy and complete condemnation of the whole principle of sumptuary legislation.

The British Premier Out of Temper.—In the discussion which took place in the House of Commons on the 6th inst., on the questionings to which Ministers were subjected relative to the Dano-German Conference, Lord Palmerston showed symptoms of feebleness of an altogether unusual character. Mr. B. Osborne, one of the first Minister's old retainers, in asking for official information, opened the way for one of Mr. Disraeli's bitterest attacks on the foreign policy of the Government; and so hard were the hits, that the jaunty Premier fairly lost his equanimity and burst into an undignified bit of temper, during which he said probably the most memorably foolish thing in his whole parliamentary career. Let us quote his words. Replying directly to Mr. Disraeli's attack:

"Let him," said he, "tell us fairly what he wants the Government to do; and let him ask this House to give a vote in support of Her Majesty's Government, if they will accept the policy which he thinks they ought to carry out. [" Oh! oh!"] Let him propose that this House will support the Crown by all the means that may be necessary to give effect to the policy he contemplates. When he does that I shall say that he is sincere in the course he adopts in this House."

In other words, Lord Palmerston asks the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons to assume the duties which belong exclusively to the sworn advisers of the Crown, while he holds no official responsibility, and enjoys no means of official information beyond that which are open to a private Member of Parliament. Lord Palmerston, in short, is the few sentences we have quoted, knocks the whole system of ministerial responsibility on the head. He could only have done this in the last pitching extremity of argument, and when he had become momentarily foolish by being needlessly angry. Lord Palmerston's view of the duties of a parliamentary opposition not only strikes at the root of responsible Government, but it would make free parliamentary criticism on ministerial acts either a mockery or an impossibility.

THE SICK AND WOUNDED.

A very large audience assembled last evening in the Academy of Music to listen to an oratorical and musical entertainment given in aid of the relief fund of the Ladies' Home United States General Hospital. Hon. George Opdyke presided. The first speaker was who, after stating the object of the meeting, proceeded to discuss the spirit which has evoked this war. War, he remarked, is so monstrous an attrocity, such a fell wrong against humanity, that it should never be evoked by any trivial cause. Most wars originate in the ambition of tyrants, who seek to aggrandize themselves at the expense of the people, to build up empires, and enslave humanity. Two wars have originated in a desire to benefit mankind; and our war is no exception to this general rule, for it is essentially a war of despots, or tyrants. The rebellion does not present an example of a people rescued of their rights, denied a voice in the making of laws, deprived of immunities, and generally degraded, given to vague tyrannical atrocities; it presents the example of a people who, threatened with national death, remonstrated, until remonstrances became a farce, and then seized the sword, preferring to die, if by their death the nation could be preserved. And this was right. Far better to die in defence of our rights; far better that men should write the charter of their liberties in blood than that they should become the vassals and slaves of tyrants. Who pretends that this is a rebellion of the oppressed against oppressors—a war for imperiled rights against tyranny. Who does not know that this is a war of oppressors to strengthen oppression—for the avowed purpose of extending slave territory—for the enrichment and aggrandizement of the few at the expense of the many? Such is the character of the war which is waged by the South against the Government. Such is the character of the war which the Government accepted, not hastily—accepted in defence of liberty and those institutions which we have inherited from our fathers; accepted, when not to have done so would have proved that the nation had already lived too long. But it has entailed upon us immense sacrifices—sacrifices inconceivable, appalling. Two hundred thousand graves mark where our heroes lie; five hundred thousand more may be demanded. But is this too much? Were it better that Liberty should die than that our brothers should lay down their lives in her defence? No! a thousand times no! Better, far better, that a nation should die than that it should survive hence, and become degraded and infamous in the sight of men. The speaker closed with an eloquent appeal for the sick and wounded soldiers. After music by Grafulla's Seventh Regiment Band, the Chairman introduced who said he was not one of those who believed that the war was owing to the fiery speeches of Southerners, nor by the radical speeches of Northern men. The cause was in the blood, and has to work itself out. The North and West are democratic in origin and tendency; the South, originally democratic, was irresistibly drawn, by the character of her social institutions, toward aristocracy. It is sometimes said that the South is not a republican; this is erroneous. She is aristocratically republican. For more than fifty years we have been trying to compromise, and to compromise very much in the style of the deacon of a certain church, which as the story runs, was really distressed on the question of the removal of the church orifice, one party favoring one site, one another. At length matters grew to be so serious as to threaten the existence of the church, and the minister preached a very moving sermon on the necessity for conciliation and compromise. The heart of our deacon was melted. Grasping the leader of the opposite party by the hand, he exclaimed, "Brother, we must compromise this; a difference must give up, and I must be the man!" "No, I can't give up to you!" This is the way the South used to compromise with the North. But we need not go into the details of that doleful history. Adverting at once to the present war, the speaker remarked that the North put her trust in brains and not in sepulchres. She had faith in the power of ideas. Give us time, said the people of the North, give us liberty of the press, and we will by argument, by voice, convince the South and secure the perpetuity of the Union. And they were in the way to do it. Men said that we ought to hold our tongues, to preserve a discreet silence in regard to political differences. Nothing is so dangerous as for men to hold their tongues when public wrongs are to be remedied. Talking was the safety-valve of the nation. As long as this safety-valve was open, there was no danger of an explosion. While the steam was escaping during these fifty years, there was no explosion; but when the safety-valve was loaded down, when an endeavor was made to crush free expression of opinion, there ensued an explosion which nearly shattered the nation to pieces. The North believed that with time and free discussion, we could gain the victory for liberty, but the South, fearing what the North hoped for, opposed to argument the sword. It was not optional with the North to fight. To have refused to take up the gauntlet thrown down by the South, would have been the refusing to fight the robber who stands away your child. The North was so confident in the victory of ideas, that it was slow to war, and hesitated until to hesitate longer would have been to turn her back on national honor. We have a peace party among us, men who cry out that the war must stop. But in sliding down hill, if you don't want to go to the bottom you should not start at all. A man who starts to slide down a glacier must not hope to stop half way. This nation is rushing, not down an icy glacier, but over a dreadful pathway of fire, and there can be no pause until the end is attained. This question between the North and South is simply one between wind and bottom, and we must fight it out. Mr. Beecher ridiculed the abortive drafts which the Government has made, and comparing them to nets which caught men, as one of the Apostles caught fish upon a certain occasion—each man with a piece of money in his mouth to purchase his commutation. He would have the Government prepare a draft which should not only catch men, but hold them. He referred to the military despotism which reigns at the South, and has made a soldier of every citizen capable of bearing arms. He spoke of the truly democratic spirit of the North, and pointed with pride to the fact that newspapers like the Journal of Commerce and the Express [illegible] but which, if uttered in Richmond or Charleston, would subject their Government, [illegible] the most extreme punishment, and the immediate hanging of the editors.

In concluding Mr. Beecher spoke of the great number of Southern refugees reaching to the Rivers, and the sympathy which they manifest. He spoke of the remarkable change which had come over the South. At the beginning of the war one Southerner was pitted against five Yankees and drive the whole army back to Boston. Now, the South wages a defensive war, behind intrenchments, and Gen. Grant in vain sought to draw them out into an open fight. This mode of warfare exposed us to greater losses, especially for wounded. We count our wounded by tens of thousands. They crowd our hospitals. Two ships filled with fighting, and this is the best thing that could happen. We needed sorrow to chasten the flame spirit of enterprise and extravagance which possessed the nation. But let 15 years go by. There is not a man who now languishes in the hospital, who would exchange his honorable scars for the coronet insignia that royalty could bestow. The day may come when a man may almost wish he had but one leg. Mr. Beecher paid a noble tribute to the generous, self-sacrificing women who have volunteered their assistance in the hospitals of the sick and wounded. Never, said he, was the ministry of women more divine; their office being not only to relieve the physical suffering of the wounded, but to comfort, to cheer, and counsel sole. He spoke of the wealth of New-York, and said that if any man had a right to a share of it, it was the man who had perilled his life for the nation, and was brought back wounded and suffering, from the field of battle.

The next address was delivered by

HON. JAMES T. BRADY.

On coming forward Mr. Brady made a very beautiful allusion to the fresh bouquets that adorned the table at which he stood. Some might be inclined, he said, to call them the emblems of Faith, Hope and Charity; he would prefer to designate them as Wit, Victory and Union. From flowers, the transition to ladies was easy and natural. The Almighty, said the speaker, seems to have made a most radical difference between men and women. Men are always boasting of what they have done; while a woman can't be induced to speak of what she has performed. The Almighty seems to have designed men to go and do the fighting, while the women remained at home to do the nursing. He paid a high compliment to the devotion of the Northern women to the cause of the Union, but thought that their zeal was inferior to that of the women of the South. Had they been more in earnest in urging their friends onward to the good cause, he believed the war might have been ended long ago. At this moment there were more young men in this City who would rejoice to see the success of the rebellion, than there were of those who would rejoice to see the Union triumphant. The time may come when it may be a question which shall remain—the traitors or the loyalists. He had heard of Fort Lafayette, and he had a good many friends who deserved to be there. Much has been said, too, about usurpations of power; but where in history will you find a war against rebellion conducted with such moderation? The speaker referred to the famous immigration into this country, and to the fact that it was all for the North, and hence drew the conclusion that the North would in any case be ultimately victorious, as for every loyalist in battle, a full-grown traitor must stay to supply his place, while there was no such supply for the exhausted ranks of the Southern army.

Mr. Brady's rather discursive speech was frequently interrupted by applause. He was followed by

REV. E. H. CHAPIN.

The Rev. gentleman began by reviewing the fashionable charity sermon of Dean Swift, and said, pointing to the flag which overhung the stage and to the wounded soldiers who were seated behind the speakers, "Here is the dog and there are the men who deserved at the last last the sermon—and he respectfully called upon them to "come down with the dole." Mr. Chapin, however, proceeded to make a most lovely and eloquent appeal to the sympathies of the audience on behalf of the wounded. In conclusion, he said the time might come when every man might be called upon to go to the front, and every woman be called to stand ready to receive the wounded. Never, he reflected, did history throw back upon us wrecks of humanity, demanding our tenderest care, our highest honor. What have we all done, he asked, in comparison with the humblest soldier who has gone forward to fight the great battle of Union? The Union will be the proving ground in which shall be tested the form of one of these forms of the war.

Mr. Chapin was followed by Hon. N. G. Taylor, of East Tennessee, who gave a moving description of the sufferings of his compatriots in the cause of the Union; and by Parson Brownlow, who in a characteristic speech, which frequently set the house in a roar, gave the audience a bit of personal reminiscence from his own experience during the early days of the rebellion.

All the speakers were frequently and enthusiastically applauded, the exhilarating music of Grafulla's Seventh Regiment Band was appreciated by the audience to the fullest extent.

The National Finances.

Washington, D. C., Tuesday, June 21, 1864.

A few days ago the New-York Evening Post urged the Secretary of the Treasury, to accept all the bids that had been put in for the Seventy-five Million Loan. The argument of the editor was substantially this: That patriotic people had come forward and offered the Government their money, at what they considered a fair price, and that the Secretary owed it to them to accept their offers, and give them the bonds at their own bids.

It seems to me that this proposition is utterly indefensible. Does it mean more or less than this—that as the bidders desire Government bonds, they ought to be permitted to have them at their own prices, regardless of their value as investments, and utterly regardless of the interests of those who already hold United States bonds, bought and paid for at fair rates?

Suppose the bids had ranged from ten cents on the dollar, to ten per cent. above par, would the Post have the Secretary award the loan to all the bidders? And yet, if the rule recommended by the Post is good for anything, it would compel the award of the loan to the lowest bidder, as well as to the highest. Besides, let it come to be understood that Mr. Chase will accept all bids, regardless of their rates, and we shall speedily find every bid below par, and constantly falling, until Public Loans, as a means of obtaining money, will be as nearly "played out" as Jeff. Davis' Treasury is confessed to be already.

The only safe rule in this matter is the one adopted by the Secretary of the Treasury—that of rejecting every bid which he does not consider is to the interest of the Government or the benefit of its credit to accept. With the recent legislation by Congress increasing the national expenses to $600,000,000 per annum, and perhaps a hundred millions more, he is not likely to find his loans going begging at poverty-stricken rates, especially when European capitalists are urging him to put out a foreign loan that will give him control of the market for foreign exchange, and at the same time afford him all the balance of money necessary to carry on the war. But capital is abundant in the United States; and where the men who are looking daily for investments at six per cent. in currency find they cannot make the public credit a mere foot-ball of their private interest, they will be found glad enough to invest in United States bonds, the interest upon which is payable in gold, and so not subject to the vexations inseparable from investments, the income from which is paid in paper. G.

The City Railroads.

The Joint Special Committee of the Common Council to inquire into the abuse and illegalities of our City railroads, gave another hearing yesterday. Mr. Gilmore, who spoke at the former hearing, narrated particulars of damage done to carts and drivers by accidents happening from getting into or within crossing the deeply grooved and professedly safe rails used by some companies. Mr. John R. McCunn stated that he leases $1,600 a year on rent of a building in Washington-street, in consequence of the railroad in that street passing the door, rendering it quite impossible to receive and deliver goods from carts. Mr. Gilmore said, as before, that the police protect the cars against the carts, and should, and sometimes clubbed the cartmen, if they were not as active in getting off the track for the cars, as the policemen impatiently expected they should be.

The Chairman of the Committee asked if any of the railroad companies were represented and invited to be heard. No one appearing, he remarked that "the railroad companies seem to intend to let our action go by default, and the committee will have to give judgment accordingly." He then said that the committee had, by personal inspection and by convincing evidence laid before them, become satisfied that the observations complained of were intended to demand the attention of the Common Council; that no further testimony was needed in support of this view, and that the committee would soon take action in the matter, which would give satisfaction to the cartmen and others whose interests are now disregarded by some of the railroad companies.

The Committee then adjourned.

FROM HAVANA.

News from Mexico via Galveston—Miscellaneous.

HAVANA, Saturday, June 18.

By the English steamer Scotia, which arrived on the night of the 16th instant, we have dates from Galveston, Texas, to the 12th inst.

The Galveston Bulletin purports to have received news from Eagle Pass, to the 31st of May, stating that Maxia and the French troops defeated Doblado, and are now fighting, and that within thirty days the French troops will have occupied the entire western shore of the Rio Grande.

We have nothing new from St. Domingo.

Don Tomas Lobo, who was an officer in the Spanish fleet now in the Pacific, and who accompanied Marshal Machado from the Chincha Islands to St. Thomas, (where they arrived on the 28th of May, and where the latter embarked for Southampton,) goes by the Moorsom to New-York en route for Madrid.

The Sigle, the only paper here which has defended the Union cause against the "Secesh" attacks of the Dixie, and which has joyed over our successes and sorrowed over our losses and defeats, was yesterday suspended—it is feared forever.

The heat has been almost insupportable lately, and there is considerable yellow-fever in our harbor and ashore.

OUR HAVANA CORRESPONDENCE.

Military Matters in St. Domingo—News from Porto Rico and Venezuela—Opinions as to the Panama Rise—Affairs in Hayti, &c., &c.

HAVANA, Saturday, June 18, 1864.

Another engagement, near Monte Cristi, took place on the 6th inst., the scene of strife being again the Laguna Verde, where an encounter had previously occurred on the 27th ultimo. Gen. Gandara having received information that the insurgents had regular ammunition in store, and were preventing several families that wished to present themselves within the Spanish lines from doing so, at once sent out two detachments—one composed of three battalions of infantry, four pieces of mountain artillery, and a squadron of fifty cavalry, under the orders of Count Valmaseda, toward said hamlet; and the other detachment, under Col. Fuesen, to El Paledero and La Magdalena. The former detachment, whilst about to breakfast, were attacked by a body numbering 1,500 men. The insurgents were repulsed, but when the Spanish troops returned, their opponents again began the attack, keeping up a raking fire, which obliged the Spaniards to face and charge, and so regains their enemies that the attack was not renewed. The insurgents left seven dead on the field, and one prisoner was taken. The Spanish loss was two killed, six wounded, four bruised and two missing. The other detachment, which succeeded in bringing some families to Monte Cristi, was attacked during the march in Pandero and Magueza, but their assailants were dislodged and scattered, leaving six dead—the wounded they carried off. The Spanish loss was three wounded.

By the steamer Agueda, which arrived on the 12th instant, we have news up to the 9th.. The steamer Morro had carried to Santiago de Cuba 114 sick and 150 wounded soldiers. A letter from Monte Cristi says: "Yesterday we gave the cowards fighting against these shores our arrival at this town." Then follows a long account of the above-mentioned affair. The Spain touched at Samana and Puerto Plata, and reports that the insurgents had not dared to make any serious demonstrations against the garrison at the latter place. In the City of St. Domingo a squadron of 25 Peons had been stationed in the cathedral for the security of Monte Cristi. At the service the Cabildo-General, the Supreme Court, State Council and other official dignitaries were present.

The Times says: "At the same time such pleasing news was received in this capital, His Excellency, being informed with the chief contained in this letter, read several communications which announced the favorable aspect of affairs in Santo Domingo and Monte Plata, where there are no bodies of insurgents to fight, but only to plunder the dwellings of quiet country people."

Gen. Del Villar, in command during the absence of Gen. Gandara at Monte Cristi, has issued a proclamation on the capture of that port, taken so easily, though the Government at Santiago had concentrated there great elements of defence. He lays great stress on a letter from the said Government recommending the defence of the place at all hazards, as its loss would be a mortal wound.

The Gaceta, of Puerto Rico, publishes the permission to Don Ezeo to make the surveys for a railroad between Humacao and the point of Santiago. The Spanish mail steamer had left an immense quantity of tents, and also seven hundred and twenty different tents. At Mayaguez there had been sympathies of an earthquake, and from Santiago de Cuba we have similar information. The customs revenue of that port, for the last four months, had amounted to $126,312 4ds.

At Mayaguez we have had two arrivals of French war-steamers, the Fleche and the Lavoisier. The Ponce newspaper asserted that the former was sent expressly to convoy Santa Anna back to Mexico with all possible honor; but the Diario daily contradicts this, and, as it called on Saturday for New-York, no doubt the Diario is correct. From your City the Fleche will proceed to France.

From Trinidad, on the south side of this island, we hear of the death of one of the richest planters of Cuba, Don Jose Mariano Borrell, Marquis of Guisasola, Grand Cross of the Order of Isabel the Catholic, Colonel of militia. He was, however, best known for his eccentric love of wild animal life, and for being the uncle of Gen. Serrano' wife, the Duchess de la Torre.

The Diario denies that any American vessel has been overhauled by Spanish war-vessels, as it has been reported was the case in a schooner named the Fleet, on its way from St. Martins to Baracoa. It continues:

"But the fact is, there no such event took place. According to information that we have endeavored to acquire, and worthy of credit, no Spanish frigate has detained and examined any vessel carrying the American flag."

The St. Domingo paper, La Epoca, which we have sometimes quoted, has ceased to exist, not having sufficient subscribers to defray expenses.

Of our latest news from Caracas, mention the arrival at that city of President Falcon, and, as a consequence of this, the programme of the Minister Fleury was expected. The State of Ciudad Bolivar is represented as being in very depressed condition, but no political disturbance was apprehended. The Federalista says that defeat growing was being carried on to an extreme, so as to extent that there were not sufficient hands to get in the crop. M. Emile Hermann, the agent of a large French firm, extensively engaged in colonizing districts in Venezuela, arrived here with families from the Lower Pyrenees, but survived his Caracas, and, it was hoped, would induce French immigrants to proceed to Aragua. The same paper calculates that 50,000 bales of cotton will be exported this year, and more than 100,000 next year. Of 8,000 bales lately exported to Liverpool, the quality was asserted to be equal to the best Pernambuco.

One of the Spanish officials, lately so unjustly accused of Fenians, has come to Havana. His name is Don Luis Lair, pursuant of the affair another Don Intrigantino. The Diario, in a leader on the subject, observes:

"The overhearings plotted on board the Tubal, and in the list of Fenians, concocted by the so-styled Commissioner of the State, against two distinguished persons speaks sufficiently on in the social and moral condition of certain countries, in which, under the show of lying forms and words, there are neither order, liberty nor respect to any law, right nor principle. And thus the intervention of civilized Europe will be continued against by those who attack the security of this line of travel by the Isthmus, which is to be viewed as a neutral road for the traffic of all nations."

On Wednesday the two Spanish war-steamers, the Vigilante and the Lealtad, left here for New-York. The former will proceed to Spain, but the latter is to be stationed in your City.

On the same day there entered the French frigate Thouars, the same which conveyed Maximilian from Trieste. It left Vera Cruz on the 9th, but merely remarks that the Emperor left Orizaba on the 6th for the capital.

On the day previous there entered the propeller Tacamacon, which left Port-au-Prince, Hayti, on the 11th. On board was the Spanish Consul, Don Mariano Alvarez, who will proceed to the States to recover his health. President Geffrard had issued orders, which, after the frustrated attempt at Gonaives, had been disarmed. In the prisons of Port-au-Prince, locked up in a dungeon, was the famous Dominican leader Ramon, who accompanied Franco-Santana in his expeditions. LARA.

CETARRH CURED.

THE CASE OF HUTCHINGS, THE "LIGHTNING CALCULATOR."

There was published in these columns a few days since the remarkable cure of Hutchings, the "Lightning Calculator," so well known to the public during the many years he exhibited his wonderful arithmetical powers at Barnum's Museum, by the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, Dr. Von Eisenberg, of this City. Hutchings is represented to have been at the point of death, and but for the timely interference of the Doctor, would now be rotting in his grave. This is a remarkable case, and worthy of the attention of persons similarly afflicted.

We think it is but just to Doctor Von Eisenberg to call public attention to this case. There are hundreds in the community suffering from catarrh, who, like the "Lightning Calculator," if not actually praying for death, are ready to accept of anything that promises to relieve them from their distresses. To such we would say, relide not with incompetent men, but consult, without unnecessary delay, Dr. Von Eisenberg, who, at least, had the honesty to assure his patients whether it is within his power to make them whole or not.

DEAFNESS CURED.

From the Tribune.

EARS TO THE DEAF.

Every man, and especially every woman, believes in his or her physician. There are philosophical minds which hold to an abstract faith in Allopathy, or Homeopathy, or Hydropathy, or some other form of scientific cure; but with the world at large the belief is not in the system, but in the doctor. Especially is this true as regards aurists and oculists. The patient who has recovered his sight or his hearing is sure that the blessing could have been restored to him by no other practitioner than that particular one by whom his eyes or ears were opened. Dr. Von Eisenberg is among our best-known aurists. He has not lost an ear as a brother practitioner has eye, and in whose skill, therefore, we believe above all others. But we hear of him from those who esteem him not merely as a surgeon, but as a benefactor. A recent case has been related to us, for the truthfulness of which we can vouch, though we can name no names. The patient was a lady who had been deaf from infancy, as a consequence of some of the ailments to which children are liable. Latterly the disease had taken an acute form, and the patient was subject to intense suffering. The deafness was rapidly becoming complete, and the general health breaking down under the physical exhaustion attendant upon constant pain. Ordinary remedies and ordinary advice were useless, and Dr. Von Eisenberg was called in. We need not repeat his diagnosis, for that would be only a list of hard names to the general reader. But he discovered at sight the seat of disease, first in one portion of the organism, then in another, and with manipulation as skillful as his insight was accurate, he removed the cause, and she who, from infancy, had heard with difficulty, and latterly hardly at all, was restored first to perfect hearing and then to perfect health. Dr. Von Eisenberg's advertisement reminds us of this case, which we thus briefly relate, though not as his solicitation. Let him that hath not ears, hear.

From the Christian Times.

SIGHT RESTORED.

CONCERNING EYES AND OCULISTS.

Of the five senses, that which we call seeing is the most important and most valued. In proportion as this sense fails us, we are reduced to helplessness. If entirely destitute of sight, how slow would be our progress in knowledge, and how limited our sphere of action and usefulness. Endowed with it, the universe becomes a new creation, clothed with beauty and diversified by that infinite variety which never fails to attract the mind and heart.

For several months past this has been a practical subject to us. An inflamed condition of the eyelids communicating itself to the pupil, rendered the discharge of daily duties not only painful, but dangerous. Attributing it to the effect of a cold, we endured it through the Spring, with the hope that with the return of warm weather it would entirely disappear. But in this we were deceived to disappointment. Summer arrived, but not our wonted sight. What might have been the result, either of further neglect or of incompetent treatment, we cannot say.

Stating our case to a friend, he assured us that a doctor one in his own family had recently been treated with entire success by Dr. Von Eisenberg, of this City, flattering ourselves by mere particular inquiries that the doctor is no empiric, but a scientific oculist and aurist, we concluded to seek the benefits of his treatment, which we have new reason to acknowledge is very great. Though but a few weeks under his care, the appearance of our eyes has totally changed. The pupil is now full and clear, and the lids are entirely free from inflammation. The doctor says that the optic nerve has been weakened and the retina assumed a chronic inflammatory state, affecting more or less all the other tissues, and threatening, if neglected, to end in Amaurosis. Ophthalmia, is the term we believe, which oculists apply to eyes affected as were ours. Having obtained the much desired relief, we take great pleasure in acknowledging our indebtedness to the talent of Dr. Von Eisenberg, and of calling to it the attention of others who may be suffering from a similar or even worse condition of their eyes. It is said that Providence provides an antidote for every bane. It is certain that the eye is, in these times, subject to earlier ills than formerly. Let us be thankful, then, that as we increase the tendencies which destroy the organ of vision, the progress of science keeps pace with them tendencies, if not in advance, at times.

NEW-YORK, June 22, 1864.

I have made a chemical analysis of the Tropical Balsam prepared by Messrs. Carrow Bros. & Co., and found, after a thorough examination of it, that it is composed exclusively of vegetable substances—principally of gums and resins—possessing decided medicinal properties. It contains nothing that can prove deleterious to health when taken internally or applied externally; its astringent and healing properties being well calculated to stop hemorrhage and heal wounds, ulcers, &c.

Successor to Dr. Jas. R. Chilton & Co.,

Heads of families are advised to keep always this Balsam by them, in order to use it in time in cases of Wounds, Hemorrhages, Burns, Bruises, &c., thus obtaining an immediate cure, and saving time, substance, and money; also, those who are devoted to such occupations as expose them to danger, or require the use of instruments whereby they may be injured.

MEDICAL.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 50 Elizabeth-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, Iodine or any other injurious drug. Dr. WARD has been for a long time chief physician of Edinburgh, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 22 years' practice he has cured more cases of Gonorrhœa and Wasting Weakness than any other living physician. Consultation free, strictly confidential and at less expense than any other city or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, and yet will derive but little benefit, may safely place themselves in his hands. Many have been unfortunate, and, of course, by his great experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a perfect cure in the shortest possible time. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestiges confined within the use of Mercury, formerly pronounced incurable in a short time. Stricture, Impotence, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks, permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 51 Franklin-st., Gaslight, only written.

CAUTION.—CHLORODYNE—IN CHANCERY—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood, by affidavits from eminent hospital physicians in London, that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and none so other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, Jan. 13, 1864. The public are cautioned against spurious compounds, and asked to see that the signature of Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, which is affirmed by medical testimonials to be the most efficacious medicine ever discovered for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Spasms, Rheumatism, &c. None should be without it. J. T. DAVENPORT, No. 33 Great Russell-st., London, sole manufacturer. Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, on the wrapper of the genuine article, bears the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," on the Stamp. Agent, New-York, Mr. JAMES ASPINWALL, Union-sq.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

All sufferers from the above complaints, either of recent or long standing, are advised to use Blair's Gout and Rheumatic Pills. They can be relied upon as the most safe and efficacious medicines offered to the public, and have been universally used in Europe for many years with the greatest success.

Prepared by PROUT & HASSANT, No. 229 Strand, London, and sold by their agents, F. C. WELLS & CO., 218 Franklin-st., and by most druggists.

Her Majesty's Commissioners have authorized the name and address of "Thomas Prout, No. 229 Strand, London," to be inserted upon the Government stamp affixed to each box of the genuine medicine.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

Comments of the Press upon Lee's Retreat from Spottsylvania Court-House.

AN IMPORTANT ARRIVAL FROM BERMUDA.

Ex-Senator Clay and Ex-Secretary Thompson Abroad on a Special Mission for the Rebels.

The National Steam Navigation Company's steamer Pennsylvania, which left Liverpool at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 7th, and Queenstown on the 8th of June, arrived here yesterday morning. The Hansa, from Southampton, with dates to the 9th, also arrived last evening. The Kiel by these records one day later than, though their news is not so late by three days as that per the Africa.

GREAT BRITAIN.

EFFECT OF THE NEWS—HOW THE SITUATION IS REGARDED.

From the London Star, June 8.

GRANT is driven within sight of Richmond. LEE has abandoned his intrenchments on the Po, and fallen back to the South Anna River. * * * It is quite possible that Lee's retreat from Spottsylvania was rendered necessary by the difficulties of obtaining supplies, and that Sheridan's advance was nothing but a reconnoissance in force. In either case it is indisputably a manifestation of weakness. It shows an inferiority of resources, either in men or supplies, not only sufficient to allow of the risk of another battle; for it is not to be supposed that an able commander would allow himself to be outflanked, nor that GRANT would risk the extension of his lines to the east if he were strong enough to attack Lee in front. If he were strong, the fact must be admitted to be of disastrous importance to the Confederacy. They have been compelled to evacuate another belt of Virginian soil—the soil for which they have hitherto fought with a determination that threatened to wear out the patience of the North. From Fredericksburg to the position reached by GRANT is fully twenty-five miles, or nearly half the distance to Richmond. We may be sure that Lee would not have defended that territory with such heavy loss to himself as well as to his adversary, if he did not know it to be well worth the effort and the cost. It is foolish and disingenuous to attribute the movement to a strategical purpose or to any purpose other than that which is clear—that the chief commander in the Confederate service on this chosen and peculiar battle-ground of the Confederacy is unable to keep the field against a General who, with ability and resolution equal to his own, has superior resources. It is none the less certain that there may be other and even yet more desperate battles to be fought before the prize is reached. Much may depend upon the operations of Sherman and Banks. Of the former we have no information this week; but it is certain that he has taken up intrenched positions on both banks of the Kenesaw River against every attack. So long as he does this, it is impossible for SHAFFNBARGH to reinforce LEE, or for Richmond to feel secure against an attack in the rear. In GRANT and SHERMAN the Union has Commanders of rare energy and patriotism; and everything that brings GRANT nearer to Richmond renders more dangerous the movement of the Southern Central.

From the Manchester Guardian, June 6.

Beyond doubt, it was a flank movement, and if LEE moved first, it may also be called a pursuit; but it would be rather the mark to describe the movement of the greater as strategic, or, nearly so, the retreat of the smaller were glorious, and both alike divined each other's plans. It was the old game from Chancellorsville to Spottsylvania Court-House repeated, and with substantially similar results, saving the important exception that the end of the second race brings both parties nearly as far to the rear as they were at the start. The double will not be deemed a masterpiece by any who take an interest—as all must, surely, in this great contest. The simplest tribute and can pay to a General in the field, to whose skill the lives of thousands and the destinies of a great nation are confided, is to try to do justice to his proceedings; and the sympathy lavished by the suffering and the heroism of soldiers in the hour of battle cannot but awaken an interest in knowing where and how they died.

From the Manchester Examiner, June 6.

If LEE's retreat from Hanover Court-House was a masterly one, it was a fine one, and if LEE moved first, it may also be called a pursuit; but it would be rather the mark to describe the movement of the greater as strategic, or, nearly so, the retreat of the smaller were glorious, and both alike divined each other's plans. It was the old game from Chancellorsville to Spottsylvania Court-House repeated, and with substantially similar results, saving the important exception that the end of the second race brings both parties nearly as far to the rear as they were at the start. The double will not be deemed a masterpiece by any who take an interest—as all must, surely—in this great contest. From the Manchester Guardian, June 6.

It is a striking proof of the success with which the Confederate army in Virginia has hitherto repelled the present invasion that the news brought by the Africa is acknowledged to cause some disappointment in their friends. To those only who believed that Gen. GRANT had at last met an equally obstinate and resolute opponent at the Wilderness, and that Spottsylvania could not be a surprise to hear that, on the 20th and 21st of May, he was still able and willing to renew his enterprise against Richmond. This, however, is the substance of the most recent intelligence from the principal field of battle. It is but for the Southern cause, just to the extent of showing that their outlasting work of self-deliverance had not yet been accomplished. If the Federal Commander-in-Chief had only had the same relative power at his disposal as his predecessors, if he had been of the same temperament as they were, or if possibly the necessity for a military success had not been conceived to be more urgent now than in any previous instance, he would have renewed Aggregate also immediately on declared the campaign at an end after his desperate and unsuccessful attempts to break the Confederate lines. Which of these important conditions, or in favor of perseverance prevailed, or whether they all combined to make Gen. GRANT go on, we have no data to decide upon; but the inference that he is actually engaged on the line of the Po is a fair one, and is based on over-confidence on the part of the Southerners with the South. That he has not succeeded in turning Lee's right, or, from the nature of the ground, in forcing him on far to retreat, is a fact which, if it be true, clear, from the beginning of the operations, that he is far to be regretted. The enormous expenditure of men and money by the Government during the Winter and early Spring, were not exhausted during the first month of the campaign. They had proved altogether inadequate for the vaunted purpose of crushing LEE at a bound; but there was enough of them to make a still protracted struggle for the Union possible, and the critical test of their sufficiency in the hands of GRANT was again adjourned.

The Manchester Examiner and Times says that the recent battles in Virginia have been fruitless to the North, and adds: "The military writers who boldly predicted that Spottsylvania Court-House would prove to the Confederacy what Waterloo proved to the French Empire have found their prophecy falsified almost as soon as uttered." It thinks that, even the whole, it is scarcely clear the Confederate cause has gained in Virginia, and if their communications are longer, their supplies out of they must find extreme difficulty in maintaining themselves in Richmond.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

In both Houses of Parliament on the 6th, Ministers presented a message from the Queen recommending a grant of £30,000 sterling to Sir ROWLAND HILL for his distinguished services, and a pension of £1,000 a year to the Chancellor of Exchequer.

In the House of Commons, on the same evening, the Conservatives made an attack upon the Government for its course on the Danish question.

Mr. DISRAELI strongly denounced Ministers for having betrayed Denmark, and mocked the House of Commons; and the remarks were greeted with vociferous cheering. Lord PALMERSTON replied with much warmth.

There were indications of a crisis, but finally the subject was quietly allowed to drop.

Upon a vote for the removal of the National Gallery, Ministers were defeated by 136 to 132, amid loud cheers from the opposition.

AN ARRIVAL FROM BERMUDA.

From the Manchester Examiner, June 6.

The Merrie Freeman, Capt. Jones, bound for Liverpool, left Hamilton on Sunday morning the 29th ult., with 100 bales of cotton, and also £70,000 in gold, entirely on account of the Confederate Government. Lieutenant C. D. Gale, of Alabama, and Mr. James Thomas, of Mississippi, left Wilmington in the Thistle, and, after arrival at Bermuda, started for Halifax. It is reported that they are engaged in the secret service of the Confederate Government.

She brings 200 tons of saltpeter, 700 bales of cotton, and £70,000 in gold, chiefly on account of the Confederate Government. Among her passengers is Confederate Lieut. BRAKER. He left Wilmington May 16, in the Thistle, which collided the Confederate TEM Jumper, where she discovered the Federal steamship chase.

THE SOUTHERN STATES.

The Times says: "By the arrival of the Merrie Freeman from Bermuda, we have intelligence daily confirming previous accounts of the privations endured by the Southerners. They are scarcely any prices; coffee is a great luxury. The news from Carolina is to the effect that no indications of a second attack exists. They in no way relax in their preparations for the continuance of war. Attention is paid exclusively to raising provisions and in securing a full commissariat for the army. Only enough cotton is allowed to provide food from disease to soldiers. The army is maintained entirely by conscription. No one is allowed to leave the country who is available. There are few recruits in the Confederate army. Germans are not pulled up, as they desert freely; the Irish prove good soldiers. The METCOCK and the Manchester are excellent and indefatigable. At the outbreak, several left for the North, but those that could get back returned to their old masters, and spread such an account of their sufferings that all are now contented to remain."

DEATH OF MR. S. W. SENIOR.

The death of Mr. SENIOR, late Master in Chancery, and Professor of Political Economy in the University of Oxford, is announced. We consider it the greatest misfortune that can befall us. We will never be cut off from Schleswig, and never be incorporated with Denmark."

A telegram from Trieste of June 7 says: "Several Austrian men-of-war have received orders to be in readiness for war, in order to join the Squadron of the North, if necessary."

In the Chamber of Deputies, on June 6, the Minister of Public Works, in reply to a question respecting the rumor of the sale of the State railways, said that nothing had been settled up to the present. A bill regarding duels had been brought forward in the Senate. A telegram from Messina states that the powder explosion did not occur at Corfu, but at Tripoli.

A telegram from Rome of June 4, says: "The Pope has received M. DE SARTIGES, the French Ambassador, who offered his congratulations upon the Pope's restoration to health. Capture of a Rebel Battery on the Atchafalaya.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 23.

A communication has been received by the Navy Department, from Admiral D. D. PORTER, giving the particulars of the expedition up the Atchafalaya River, by Lieut.-Commander RAMSAY, with the steamers Chillicothe, Neosho and Fort Hindman. When about a mile and a half from Bommesport, a battery from the shore opened upon them. The rebels were driven away, and the battery containing two 32-pounder Parrotts was captured. One of the guns, however, was burst; the other has been sent to Cairo. Our loss was small—one man only being wounded, it is thought, mortally.

The Eighth-avenue Railroad Outrage.

The policeman, who assisted the conductor in forcibly ejecting the colored Sergeant's widow from the cars of the Eighth-avenue Railroad, last Friday morning, has been summoned for trial before the Police Commissioners, at headquarters, Mulberry-street, on Wednesday morning next at 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. CUMMING, one of the directors of the Eighth-avenue Railroad, has published a card, in which he states that there was no rule passed by the Board of Directors justifying the conductors in their refusing the colored people the right to ride on any of their cars; yet it appears that the outrages continue, and a respectable colored man, in the peaceful pursuit of his daily avocation, was yesterday thrown violently off the cars by one of the conductors.

The arrest of every conductor or policeman who perpetrates an act of this unjustifiable kind, is the only way to find out from whom these orders emanate, and we are glad to hear that this is to be done.

THE ARKANSAS SENATORS.

The Senate Judiciary Committee had another discussion to-day over the admission of the Arkansas Senators. They will report against their admission. The committee, however, have not decided the very knotty question as to what is to be done with the rebel States now claiming to be in the Union under the President's Proclamation.
